Alley-yard improvement spring goal

A citywide cleanup campaign to rid Granite City's alleys of trash and debris will be conducted during the spring months by the City Inspection Department, it was announced today by Emerald Dawes, city inspector.

Dawes said the campaign also will extend to the cleanup of backyards at homes where such conditions are found, and that legal action will be taken if necessary to obtain compliance from homeowners.

Dawes said he and other employees of the inspection department completed an inspection tour of various sections of the city, and that in some areas "We found some deplorable conditions."

The inspector said he found several back yards in such condition that he already has warned the homeowners to clean up the yards or face court action.

"It is hardly conceivable that homeowners could let the grounds around their homes get in such condition," Dawes said in referring to some places he had seen.

He said alleys also are "very bad" in some sections of the city. Dawes said he took a number of pictures of alleys and back yards to support his contention that cleanup action must be taken.

Some of these photographs are shown below this article. All were taken along an alley only one block long.

In a statement directed to Granite City residents, Dawes said:

"With the approach of warmer temperatures, outside activities increase as does the accumulation of trash and debris in the residential areas. It is hoped that cooperation among the citizens and homeowners will rid Granite City alleys of the accumulation of trash and debris that occurs every spring and summer.

"The Inspection Department of Granite City plans to take stronger action against those individuals who refuse to keep their yards and alleys clean. Failure on any citizen's part to keep a clean yard will result in (Continued on Page 4)

Wolf still ahead in vote tally

Former state representative Sam W. Wolf's 371-vote victory in unofficial primary election returns won't be precisely that when canvassing is completed late today or sometime tomorrow. But it appears he will still be nominated by Democratic voters along with Rep. Jim McPike.

As of this morning, private tallies indicated that Wolf is about 100 votes ahead of Rep. Joe E. Lucco.

The three sought two party nominations for the Illinois House, with McPike proving to be the front-runner.

The five-member canvassing panel is not keeping a running count as it reviews the reports of poll judges in the March 21 primary election.

It began work Thursday, continued on Good Friday, resumed on Saturday and then returned to its duties today at the Madison County Courthouse in Edwardsville. Remaining are returns from Alton and Godfrey.

Multiplication errors by poll officials in Edwardsville Precincts Four and 14 narrowed Wolf's lead over Lucco to 38 points, and Wolf gained about 60 votes in Saturday's canvassing. At one point Thursday Lucco felt that he was about 30 votes ahead of Wolf, but he later conceded that this involved an arithmetic error in his personal computations.

Lucco and Wolf have kept track of the canvassing and have attempted to compare the decisions on each precinct with the unofficial election results in order to learn whether their outlook is improving or deteriorating.

Both indicate that if the official tally is close, the one who is trailing probably will seek a Circuit Court recount in which voting machines are opened to show their vote counts.

"Whoever is the victor will do a good job," Rep. Lucco commented Friday. "I've worked with Sam. He's a good legislator."

Await bond bids

Madison County will receive bids tomorrow on the sale of $5 million in general obligation bonds for construction of sanitary sewers in Nameoki, Chouteau and Venice townships.

If acceptable bids are received, the county is expected to sign a letter of intent with the project's contractors during a special meeting of the Madison County Board Wednesday morning.

Bids for sale of the bonds will be opened at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow in the board room in the county courthouse at Edwardsville.

County officials and bond experts then will study the bids and prepare a recommendation on the lowest acceptable bid. The County Board will meet in special session at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday to hear the recommendation on the bonds.

'Before' scenes . . .

3 young hostages freed

Two Granite City police officers had a major role in averting a possible tragedy at 11:25 a.m. Saturday when a local man held his three children as hostages at his home.

The man's wife notified police her husband was upstairs at the home with a knife and their children.

Sergeant Dennis Joyce talked with the husband on an extension telephone and the man was emphatic that no one come up the stairs.

Sergeant Glenn Wright took over the phone and asked the man what he could do to help him. The man said he wanted to be protected, as everyone was out to kill him.

Meanwhile, Sgt. Joyce contacted the man's personal physician and rigged a makeshift hookup on two telephones, enabling the man to speak with his doctor.

Between Wright, Joyce and the physician's efforts, the man agreed to go downstairs and then to a hospital. Police vehicles were withdrawn from the vicinity of the house and an ambulance was summoned to the scene.

The man came out of the dwelling accompanied by two ambulance attendants. Taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital for examination, he was admitted for observation.

Baggot is wounded

Hospital, St. Louis, after having been shot in the back of the head at 8:30 a.m. Saturday near Curt's Grill, 1623 Madison Ave. Authorities said this morning that Baggot remained unconscious and the bullet remained in his head.

Police said the incident is under investigation. A young man taken into custody at the scene is not believed responsible for the shooting.

Karl R. Chism, 22, of 2557 Madison Ave., told officers he

Michael Baggot

found Baggot lying face down next to Chism's auto in the restaurant's parking lot. He was unconscious and bleeding from the head and an ambulance was summoned to take Baggot to St. Elizabeth Hospital. He later was transferred to the St. Louis hospital.

Chism later said he and Baggot drove from Cahokia to Madison and then up Grand Avenue where Baggot said he was going in the restaurant and asked Chism to wait for him.

Chism said he later saw Baggot crawling on the ground and went to help him.

Chism also gave officers a pair of eyeglasses belonging to Baggot, which he took from inside his auto, and said he found them on the ground.

Officers did not know Baggot had been shot until they asked Chism to accompany them to the police station for investigation and Chism asked,
"Why? I didn't shoot him," police related.

Baggot then was checked and a small puncture wound was found in the back of his head. He also had multiple abrasions to his face and body, believed caused as he fell to the gravel parking lot and crawled.

Officers said questioning of Chism and other witnesses has led to identification of a suspect, but he had not been taken into custody this morning, pending additional investigation, authorities said.

Chism was charged with illegal transportation of alcohol and with not having valid registration for his auto. He was released at 11:50 a.m. Sunday after posting a $75 cash bond.

to 1 p.m. each day during the special week.

On April 7, a press conference will take place at the "Y" auditorium, beginning at 7:15 p.m. Joe Lucio, Illinois state representative, will be the guest speaker at 8 p.m.

Representatives from the American Cancer Society,
American Heart Association, American Lung Association and fire department officials will be present.

Craigler will make presentations to youngsters in the Granite City school system during the week of April 5. He also will be giving sneak previews of his clinic to various organizations throughout the community.

April 14 will mark the kickoff and Officer Bill Apperson will be the guest speaker in the YMCA auditorium at 8 p.m. At that time, people may get an advance look at the clinic to be conducted during the "Stop Smoking Week."

On April 11, 12, 13 and 15, Craigler and "Smokin' Sam" will be set up at Crossroads Plaza and Nameoki Village to inform citizens about the program to be held at the "Y."

The clinic will be held twice a day the week of April 17-21 at 10 in the morning and a different class starting at 7:30 in the evening.

The nationally famous, five-day plan, endorsed by Johnny Cash, deals with physical as well as psychological aspects of the smoking habit.

The five-day plan is aimed at improving the health of the community and contributing to the national physical fitness program, Donald R. Rains, program director of the YMCA reports.

A registration fee of $10 will be charged to cover materials given to the participants.

Smokers who wish to attend the sessions may pre-register by calling the "Y" at 876-7200.

BREAK INTO AUTO

A $200 combination radio and tape player, two speakers and four tape recordings were stolen from the auto of Doug Horton, 2512 Northridge, in the 2100 block of Washington Avenue last week. Entry to the locked auto was believed gained using a coat hanger. There was

Girl dies in crash

Miss Linda M. Kell, 17, St.
Louis, was killed and two others were injured in an auto accident on ice on Sand Prairie Lane at the viaduct just north of Route 40 (near Monks Mound) at 10:05 p.m. Saturday.

Miss Kell was a passenger in the northbound auto of John Kelley Jr., 22, of 21 Eduardo Drive, which was passing another northbound auto, went out of control on ice and spun into a bridge abutment.

Two passengers — Miss Kell and her brother, Raymond Kell, 16, were thrown from the car, which immediately caught on fire. Miss Kell then was run over by the auto of Arthur Wilson, 21, St. Charles, Mo., which they had just passed, Illinois State Police troopers said. Wilson's car then struck Kelley's, they added.

Kelley suffered extensive burns and was taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital and was transferred to the burn unit of St. John's Mercy Hospital, Creve Coeur, Mo., where sources listed him in poor condition. Authorities said he has third degree burns to his left ear, his face and neck and left upper arm and a cut to his face.

Mrs. Joanna Moser-Wilson, 17, Wentville, Mo., a passenger in Wilson's auto, was dazed in the accident and later sought treatment at St.
Elizabeth Hospital for injuries to her nose and head. She was released after x-rays were taken.

Miss Kell was taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital where she was pronounced dead upon arrival
by Madison County Deputy Coroner Randall Irwin.

She suffered injuries to her left side and internal injuries, including a broken left hip and severe head injuries, it was reported. Her body was taken to a St. Louis funeral home.

Four hurt in Rt. 203 crash

Four young people were injured when their truck went out of control on Route 203 about 300 feet south on the McCambridge Avenue viaduct southeast of Madison and overturned in a ditch at 2:45 a.m. Sunday.

David A. Chrusciel, 20, of 2307
Hodges Ave., the driver, said the truck went out of control after hitting a deep puddle of water. It then crossed three lanes before overturning in the ditch.

He and four passengers in the truck then went to St. Elizabeth Hospital for treatment where he and Miss Sharon Chrusciel, 18, of the same address, were admitted.

He suffered a possible concussion and blurred vision and she suffered a head injury and cervical strain. Both were released this morning,
authorities said.

Treated and released after the accident were Michael Champion, 21, of 2327 Hodges Ave., who suffered pain to his back, and Lou Eita Fulkerson, 14, of 2601 Sheridan Ave., whose legs were pinned under the seat and suffered pain to her back and thighs. Both were x-rayed.

Request early orders for trees

Orders are being taken this week for flowering Crabapple trees to be offered for sale Saturday, April 8, by the Home's Division of the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce.

Advance orders are placed by calling the Chamber office at 876-6600. Each tree will cost $5 and only 150 trees have been ordered this year.

Those placing orders will be notified when the trees arrive, which will be after April 5.

Railroad flare starts car fire

Harold Pruitt, 2377 Iowa St., found a railroad flare burning on the front seat of his 1963 Buick, parked outside his residence, at 9:25 p.m. Saturday, and reached inside the vehicle, knocking the flare onto the ground.

Firefighters arrived at the scene and extinguished the blazing seats. An investigation into the incident started this morning.

Pruitt said a boy came to the house and told him the vehicle was on fire. The car had been locked and entry was gained by forcing open a window vent.
Estimated loss is $100.

Arrest on warrant

Bryan Watts, 3094 E. 23rd St., was arrested at 23rd and Adams streets last week on a warrant from the Metropolitan Enforcement Group of Southwest Illinois alleging unlawful delivery of cannabis to a MECS agent.

The arrest is the sixth resulting from a two-month undercover investigation in this area by MECS agents. Watts bond was set at $20,000.

ducted at 8 p.m. Sunday at

D'Adrian Convalescent Center,

Briggs heads committeemen

Harry Briggs, Democratic precinct committeeman of Nameoki Township Precinct Eight, was selected as chairman of the township's Democratic committeemen organization Saturday morning in the township hall.

Briggs' election came as a compromise after the committeemen deadlocked on two other candidates for the chairman post. James Counts of Precinct Four, and Frank Meholic of Precinct Seven.
After attempts to break the 6-6 deadlock, the committeemen agreed to select Briggs as chairman. Meholic and Counts then competed for vice-chairman. The committeemen then deadlocked on two candidates for secretary-treasurer.

Helen Hawkins of Precinct Five and Marilyn McKeahan of Precinct 12 finally agreed to resolve the deadlock with the flip of a coin and Mrs. Hawkins won the flip, sources related.
Nameoki Township Supervisor Harold Davis addressed the group, congratulating the winners and urging them to work together for the good of the township residents. He urged all committeemen to try and inform the residents of their precincts of the many services and programs the township offers.

But the two-term legislator from Edwardsville said he also is considering running as an independent in the Nov. 7 election if he fails to capture a Democratic nomination.

"My friends and advisers feel I should run on an independent ticket, and I may do so," Lucco comments. The candidacy would be for state representative, not state senator, he adds.

The Illinois Board of Elections has ruled that an independent candidacy for Illinois House would have to be a part of a slate with a complete list of statewide candidates.

An independent party slate would need to be filed in late July or early August and all of its candidates would have to meet all petitions signature requirements.

If an independent candidate like Lucco ran in the sixth Illinois Legislative District, there is speculation that this could jeopardize the continued Springfield service of Rep. Everett G. Steele, unless there was a ruling that the minority party must be represented.

Steele is the leading Republican vote-getter in this area for the Illinois House, but his party is far outnumbered by Democrats in this region.

Since Lucco is a Democrat, this might lead to the local district being represented by three of one party in the three House seats.

$260 tools stolen, boxes recovered
Carl Stucke, 701 Kirkpatrick Homes, told police at 12:10 p.m. Friday, he had located two tool boxes which were stolen from the trunk of his auto, in the bed of a pickup truck parked in the same lot as his vehicle across from the Kirkpatrick Homes.

The truck owner, who was questioned by officers, said he had not seen the boxes and had not used the truck since March 19. Both boxes were empty.

Taken were wrenches, socket sets, electric testing equipment, sheet metal and side cutters, among other tools with a value of $260.

RADIO EQUIPMENT GONE
Richard W. Kerch, 2910 State St., said his 1975 Mercury was entered and a citizen band radio valued at $175, a regular-size airplane radio, a pocket-size version of the same model radio, a microphone and a control head to the main radio were stolen before 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

CAR TRUNK ENTERED
Tim Lane, 2540 Parkside Apartments, reported at 9 a.m. Saturday that a tire, jack and radio were stolen from the trunk of his 1977 auto while the vehicle was parked outside the apartment complex. A hole had been punched in the trunk lid to gain entry.

Bond bids

If it is acceptable, a contract for the sale will be awarded and the board members will be asked to approve a letter of intent with the G. H. Sternberg and S. M. Wilson construction companies of Granite City for the sewer installation work.

The letter of intent and the bond sale documents would be subject to approval by the Environmental Protection Agency before it would release its $12.6 million grant for the sewer construction.

When EPA approval is received — which would take about two to three weeks, according to Walter "Dick" Sparks, chairman of the county's sewer committee — the actual construction contract could be signed and construction could begin immediately.

A spokesman for the contractors said May 1 has been a tentative date to begin construction, "but we would be thrilled if we could start in mid-April. We are ready."

The Sternberg and Wilson companies submitted a joint low bid for the construction work of $15,564,306, and have held to their bid price since Sept. 30, 1976, despite rising costs of labor and materials.

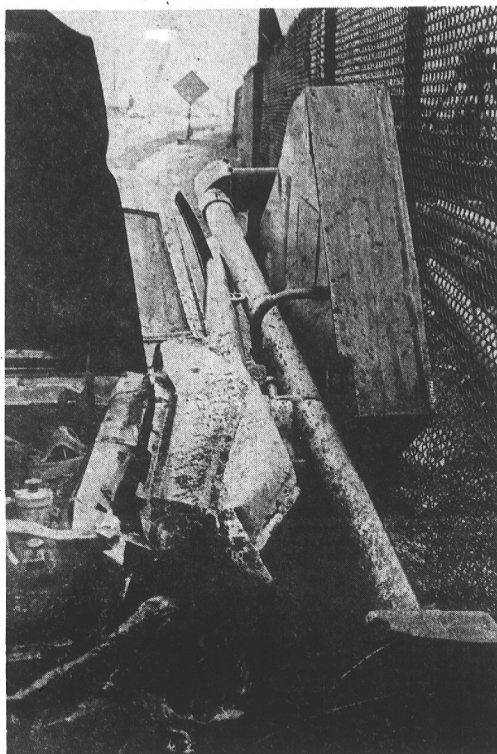

A lawsuit challenging the project's local funding held progress up 18 months, but the Illinois Supreme Court refused to hear a final appeal, thus clearing the way for the county to sell the bonds.

A special service area encompassing the residents who will receive sewer service has been established and the residents and property owners in that area will be responsible for repaying the general obligation bonds and interest through their real estate taxes. Firm amounts on what the tax levy will be can be determined after the bonds are sold and it is known what interest rate the county will be paying.

The call for bids on sale of the bonds sets a maximum interest rate of 8 percent, but it is hoped that bids offering a lower rate will be received.

Each bidder is required to submit a $100,000 certified check or bank cashier's check with the bid to assure the firm will be able to purchase the bonds when they are available at the interest rate quoted.

Both the bid opening at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday and the county board meeting at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday are open to the public.

EDWARDSVILLE ROAD CRASH. The auto of Mark Voss, 2916 Saratoga Ave., is seen wedging a traffic control light standard against the fence of the Granite City blast furnace division which the southbound auto struck after being forced to cross to the opposite side of the highway by an auto driven by Romona Fox, New Baden, Ill., near Twenty-first Street Friday morning. The crash extensively damaged the Voss auto but no injuries were reported. The large sign warns motorists of road conditions near the plant. A similar sign can be seen in the background.

An accident on Edwardsville Road, about 600 feet north of Twenty-first Street at 10 a.m. Friday, involved vehicles operated by Romona D. Fox, 21, of New Baden, Ill., and Mark S. Voss, 2916 Saratoga Ave.

Voss said he was driving south on Edwardsville Road when another vehicle approached him, traveling north in the southbound lanes, and caused him to cross to the opposite side of the highway and strike a traffic control light.

The other vehicle, a red Pontiac TransAm, continued north on Edwardsville Road and made a right turn into the main entrance to Granite City Steel Blast Furnace Division. The driver came to a halt when the car hit a pile of slag.

Guards at the plant held the driver until police arrived at the scene.

Mrs. Fox, who allegedly was in an intoxicated condition, refused to take a breathalyzer test at police headquarters and was charged with driving while intoxicated.

She was released at 1 p.m. Friday on payment of $100 cash bond to appear for a hearing by April 27. Two full bottles of beer and part of a marijuana cigarette were confiscated from the Fox auto, police said.

Loan was virtually a history of the association.

After it was organized in 1919 and operated from a local bank for eight years, the association moved into separate quarters in 1927 and Mr. Little became the first bookkeeper.

He worked in many capacities and for more than 20 years before retirement was the firm's executive officer.

A U.S. Navy veteran of World War I, Mr. Little attended the University of Kentucky before moving to Granite City in 1921. He was employed at American Steel Foundries and a local bank before joining the association.

Mr. Little was active in civic affairs for many years, having served on numerous financial committees concerned with community welfare, such as the schools, city and Chamber of Commerce, among others. He was a past president of the

Granite City Noontime Optimist Club, a 33-year member of the Granite City Elks Lodge, a past director of the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers and a member in excess of 50 years of the Masonic Order.

Mr. Little also was a member of the First United Presbyterian Church of Granite City.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ann Little; three daughters, Mrs. Martha Ann Knight of Springfield, Ill., and Misses Carol Jean and Barbara Little, both of Granite City; two sons, Douglas B. ## Jobless pay eases impact of recession

More dollars in unemployment insurance (UI) benefits were paid to workers from 1970 to 1977 than during the previous 32 years in which the UI program was in operation, Assistant U.S. Secretary of Labor Ernest G. Green reports. In the 40-year history of the program, almost $126 billion has been placed in the hands of qualified unemployed workers. Over $74 billion, about 59 percent, was paid during the 1970s. More than one-third of the total, nearly $47 billion, was paid in the last three years. In 1975, over $18 billion in benefits was paid, the most for a single year. The dollar volume of benefits paid in the '70s reflects the jobless rates that in May 1975 reached a peak of 8.9 percent, the highest level since the depression years. Green observed, "There is no telling how much more serious the economic recession would have been had not there been a system that supplied these billions of dollars in purchasing power for the jobless. "The mid-seventies posed the first real test of the UI system since its inception in the '30s and it came through with flying colors."

In recent years, several new programs enacted by Congress were made available to unemployed workers for the first time.

Three of these — the Temporary Compensation program, the Extended Benefits program, and the Federal Supplemental Benefits program — provided weekly benefits beyond the normal 26 weeks. In some cases, individuals were eligible for up to 65 weeks of payments.

The Supplemental Unemployment Assistance program provided assistance to workers, including some in agriculture, who would not normally have been covered by UI.

The Disaster Unemployment Assistance program and a liberalized Trade Adjustment Assistance program further extended the assistance available to the unemployed.

Storm sewer along Rt. 3

The Federal Highway Administration has been requested to approve installation of a storm sewer along the east side of Route Three (formerly Route 131) from Niedringhaus Avenue to Cavuza St., for a distance of about one-half mile.

No additional right-of-way acquisitions will be required, since the new sewer will be in the roadway's current right-of-way. The State Highway Division has additional information available for public inspection at the District Eight Planning Office, 6512 State St., East St. Louis.

Million summer jobs for youths

Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall has announced that more than a million disadvantaged youths, 14 through 21, will be hired this summer under the annual summer jobs programs.

Marshall said $706 million is being apportioned among 450 state and local governments serving as prime sponsors under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

The funds include $670 million of the $680 million appropriated by Congress for summer jobs and $37 million in last summer's unspent funds.

Another $23 million will be used to fund the national Vocational Exploration Program (VEP) and for summer jobs programs to be operated by Native American prime sponsors.

Marshall said sponsors are being urged to begin planning early in order to provide for an enriched summer program — offering a variety of employment and training activities aimed at meeting the needs of youths in their communities. The funds announced are estimated to provide one million summer jobs at the minimum wage of $2.65 an hour.

Funding estimates were adjusted in light of the increased minimum wage to ensure that each prime sponsor receives enough to provide the same number of job opportunities as last summer.

The summer jobs program will supplement the various activities and programs now under way under the recently-passed Youth Employment and Demonstration Projects Act. These programs are administered by the Employment and Training Administration's Office of Youth Programs.

Tourney created for anglers

By ART SCHUMANN
This is the time of year when bass anglers start getting the itch for open water. In fact, many head south for bass fishing tournaments.

Bass anglers, though, are going to find something new in tournament fishing this year. After two years of planning and preparation, the Illinois Big Bass Club has been formed. It's now accepting memberships and will start awarding prizes in April.

The club's objective is to turn Illinois into the bass fishing mecca this side of Florida. Each and every month club members have a chance to earn $1,000 fishing at their convenience because the club is offering around the clock and around the calendar fishing.

The founders of the Illinois Big Bass Club have recognized a problem for many avid bass anglers who have to miss several events because they earn a living. The continuous tournament — where the angler fishes when he can, where he can and all he can — should solve the problem.

For a $10 membership fee, bass fishermen are entitled to 12 months of fishing benefits which include $1,000 each month for the biggest bass. Fishermen can call the bass hotline at 1-217-253-4021 or read the monthly newsletter to find out which are the best bass spots in Illinois.

ALTO SONGSTERS from Prather, Grigsby and Coolidge Junior High Schools, whose voices will combine with other choral

Club rules are simple. Members are required to fish according to Illinois fishing regulations and in any legal Illinois waters.

The membership is open to anyone following these rules and who fish with a pole and line. The fishing is open to include those who prefer to fish from the bank, a boat, while wading, using an inner tube or through the ice. Any live or artificial bait, or combination of the two, may be used.

A member can enter all the good size bass he wishes every month.

The entry procedure is to take the bass to a store that has an Illinois certified scale and have the clerk write down the pounds and ounces, their name and the town. The person then measures the fish in inches and sends this information along with his membership number to Illinois Bass Club, P.O. Box 44, Tuscola, Ill. 61853.

Anglers looking for junker bass at this time of year should head for Lake Seminole. That's when the big bass are taken down in that Georgia impoundment. Bass are moving into the grass with the spawning urge and that means spinner bait time down there.

Two of the best bass producing areas on the impoundment are the Spring Creek and fish pond drain areas. Not only are the junker bass active at this time of the year, but the white bass and hybrids will be starting their spring runs soon.

The Oakland, Ark., area is fine for largemouth bass fishing. Another hot lake in Arkansas is Lake Mallard, located between Manila and Blytheville. In March of 1976, a state record 16 pound, 4 ounce largemouth was taken in the lake.

Lake Mallard is located in northeast Arkansas and was constructed in 1967. It's only about one mile long and a half mile wide covering some 300 acres. The lake is a natural for bass because of the mass of submerged trees and dead timber.

Sparger has been a member of the faculty of music at BAC since 1966. He has bachelor and master's degrees from Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, and currently is completing a dissertation for the doctor of musical arts degree at the University of Illinois.

An active member of the American Choral Directors Association, Sparger is state president-elect and editor of "The Conductors' Podium," a statewide newsletter. He also is a member of the National Association of Teachers of Singing, Music Educators National Conference and the Illinois Music Educators Association.

In addition to his work at BAC, Sparger has directed festival and church choirs. This summer, he will direct the European tour of the Illinois Youth Chorus.

The students will rehearse all day Saturday with Sparger in preparation of the 7:30 concert. A 100-voice elementary chorus will perform the numbers, "I'm gonna Sing," "The Alphabet Song," "Follow, Follow Me" and "Sneaky Snake." Mrs. Pat Michaeloff and Mrs. Cheryl Jones are the elementary chorus directors.

About 150 junior high students from Grigsby, Coolidge and Prather will sing "Americans," "I Write the Songs," "Brighten My Soul" and "Come Jesus, Holy Son of God." Alicia Hendrickson, Mrs. Cheryl Compton and Mrs. Deloris Barker are the junior high teachers.

Eighty students from North and South high school will perform in concert, "Swing Chariot," "Grand Night for Singing," "Psalm 23" and "The Stars Are With The Voyager." Mrs. Mary Ann Bright and Mrs. Gail Mueller are the high school chorus directors.

"I believe in Music" will be the grand finale presented by the combined choruses.

Joe Owens is the music consultant for the Granite City School District and Mrs. Pat Michaeloff is the vocal specialist.

The second annual Choral Music Festival will take place Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Gymnasium at Granite City High School South. Selections will be presented by about 330 students from the Granite City elementary, junior high and high school choruses.

The festival is open to the public and tickets, costing 25 cents for children and 50 cents for adults, may be purchased in advance from chorus members or at the door Saturday evening.

Dennis Sparger, director of choral activities at Belleville Area College, will direct the choruses.

Sparger has been a member of the faculty of music at BAC since 1966. He has bachelor and master's degrees from Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, and currently is completing a dissertation for the doctor of musical arts degree at the University of Illinois.

An active member of the American Choral Directors Association, Sparger is state president-elect and editor of "The Conductors' Podium," a statewide newsletter. He also is a member of the National Association of Teachers of Singing, Music Educators National Conference and the Illinois Music Educators Association.

In addition to his work at BAC, Sparger has directed festival and church choirs. This summer, he will direct the European tour of the Illinois Youth Chorus.

The students will rehearse all day Saturday with Sparger in preparation of the 7:30 concert. A 100-voice elementary chorus will perform the numbers, "I'm gonna Sing," "The Alphabet Song," "Follow, Follow Me" and "Sneaky Snake." Mrs. Pat Michaeloff and Mrs. Cheryl Jones are the elementary chorus directors.

About 150 junior high students from Grigsby, Coolidge and Prather will sing "Americans," "I Write the Songs," "Brighten My Soul" and "Come Jesus, Holy Son of God." Alicia Hendrickson, Mrs. Cheryl Compton and Mrs. Deloris Barker are the junior high teachers.

Eighty students from North and South high school will perform in concert, "Swing Chariot," "Grand Night for Singing," "Psalm 23" and "The Stars Are With The Voyager." Mrs. Mary Ann Bright and Mrs. Gail Mueller are the high school chorus directors.

"I believe in Music" will be the grand finale presented by the combined choruses.

Joe Owens is the music consultant for the Granite City School District and Mrs. Pat Michaeloff is the vocal specialist.

GREG FEIGL . . . Alabama bound

By PETE HAYES
Press-Record Sports Editor
GRANITE CITY — Several Granite City High School South senior soccer players have announced their collegiate intentions, among them all-state and high school all-American Mark Goldschmidt and Greg Feigl, who led the state in scoring last season.

Goldschmidt has signed a national letter of intent to play at Indiana University next fall on a National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) full-ride scholarship. Nearly everything needed for his education will be paid for in exchange for his participation on the soccer team.

Indiana has produced some of the most powerful teams in the nation the past three years. Goldschmidt was signed by Indiana head soccer coach Jerry Yeagley, who expressed interest in Goldschmidt because of his versatility.

Goldschmidt received 15 full-ride offers, including one from UCLA, which nearly lured him to the west coast.

Yeagley got a chance to see Goldschmidt and his South teammates play during last fall's state finals at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb.

Feigl, the most prolific scorer in South history, will play soccer at the University of Alabama-Huntsville next fall on a partial scholarship.

South's Baker feels that Goldschmidt made the right choice for his college career. "I think Indiana's one of the best schools in the nation to play soccer for," he said. "They're continually building and making their program better. They have a strong off-season weight lifting program. They work awfully hard."

"By going to Indiana, Mark will also have a greater opportunity to play professional soccer later on."

Mark won't be the only member of the Goldschmidt family to play major college

Granite City High School North's Steeler track team along with 27 other schools, did not attend a scheduled Illinois State University indoor track meet in Normal-Bloomington Saturday due to bad weather, including an ice storm that hit Central Illinois Friday night. The meet was held, however, with 14 schools participating. East St. Louis Senior high took first place, followed by Danville.

North Coach Harry Lang said, "I checked with the Illinois State Police on weather conditions in Normal and decided that it was too dangerous to go.

"Although I wanted to participate and our team did also, it was not worth endangering our students' lives."

BLOOMINGTON — Expansion of membership on the Board of Directors and Legislative Commission — and an earlier start of the boys football season beginning in the fall of 1980 — have been approved in a special referendum of member schools conducted by the Illinois High School Association (IHSA).

Votes on the two proposals to change the Association's Constitution and By-laws were counted in the IHSA office recently following a meeting of the legislative commission in the IHSA office on Jan. 30. The commission voted to place the proposals before the full membership, ballots were sent to the 836 member schools. A majority of votes on a given proposal determines its passage or failure.

Changes in the constitution to increase membership on the Board of Directors from six elected representatives to seven and to increase membership on the legislative commission from 17 elected representatives to 21 were approved by a vote of 381-233. The changes will take effect as of July 1, 1978. Members of the Board of Directors are elected from geographic divisions throughout the state for terms of three years. Members of the Legislative Commission are elected from geographic districts throughout the state for terms of three years. Terms of membership on the legislative commission are staggered. The Association conducts an election of officers in the divisions and districts in September each year.

The new structure is designed to balance the numbers of schools represented by members of both bodies. Each of the seven Board members will serve schools from three Legislative districts. Each Legislative district will be composed of approximately the same number of schools (40). The constitution provides for the Board of Directors to realign boundaries for both bodies. The next association meeting of the board is March 13, and it is expected that procedures to implement the changes will be discussed.

Changes in the boys football season by-law to allow for the beginning of fall practice as early as the third Monday preceding Labor Day and to allow for the first game to be played on the Friday preceding Labor Day were approved by a vote of 372-248. The changes become effective July 1, 1980. In the seasons of 1978 (school year 1978/79) and 1979 (school year 1979/80), the legal starting date for fall practice will continue to be the third Wednesday preceding Labor Day, and the legal date for the first game will continue to be the first Friday following Labor Day. By delaying the implementation date until 1980, schools will not be hampered in their scheduling of fall and winter interscholastic contests.

The earlier start of practice and the regular season could move ahead the dates of the annual boys football playoff series. Current terms and conditions for the series stipulate the playoffs will begin with Preliminary Round games on the Wednesday following the ninth week of the season. The current format provides for Preliminary Round games on Wednesday following the ninth weekend of the season, quarterfinal round games the next Saturday, semifinal round games on the following Saturday and the championship games in each of the five classes to be conducted at the same site on the next weekend. A school must play at least eight games prior to the end of the ninth week of the season to be eligible for the playoffs.

The boys football sport season by-law also mandates that each competitor must engage in 14 days (excluding Sunday) of practice of at least 90 minutes in length before he competes in his first game. A member school may elect to start practice and play its first game later than the allowable starting dates.

Madison is ready but weather isn't

By PETE HAYES

Press-Record Sports Editor

MADISON — For Madison High School head baseball coach Bill Campbell, the season is scheduled to officially start this Wednesday, March 29 at East St. Louis Senior High.

It's an old story familiar by now to most quad-cities residents. Rain.

BUT it's also a story that won't go away. Baseball is one sport which must have relatively dry conditions to be played, unlike sports like football and soccer.

But Campbell and his troops are making the best of a bad situation.

"I think after the first couple weeks of the season that we'll be able to tell just who'll be playing where," said Campbell. Campbell feels his Trojans squad will be a strong defensive one. Senior Joe Piechocinski (who was also the quarterback on the Madison football team) will probably anchor down the shortstop position. Keith Layton should see a lot of action at the "hot box" third base.

OTHER CANDIDATES mentioned by Campbell include outfielders Ray Pooles, Prince Gyles and Tom Leonard. Sophomore catcher Ed Burns is also attracting a lot of attention.

Campbell says defense was one thing his squad had to improve on from last season.

"We didn't have any trouble scoring runs last year," he said. "We just couldn't seem to keep the other guys from scoring more runs than we did."

MADISON finished last season with a 5-19 record, falling to Edwardsville in the district championship game at Granite City South. Which leads Campbell to another reason as to why he's optimistic about the upcoming season.

This season marks the first time baseball schools are broken down into the same Class A and AA brackets that began in 1973 with basketball and has since been started in other ISHA sports.

"The two class set up will really help us," said Campbell. "We've had to play way over our heads the last few years in the districts. Now we will be playing schools more our size."

MADISON DIDN'T fare too poorly against big schools last season, they defeated Granite City North in the district semifinals last season and had a winning record against the Steelers.

The Madison pitching corps will be full of right-handers. Seniors Keith Werner and Lloyd Williams and junior Kenny Stanley were mentioned by Campbell as having good shots at starting spots.

MISSING from the squad from last season is graduated lefty Pete Pecurka who compiled a 4-1 record... all but one of Madison's victories.

In girls' track

South's future appears bright this season

By PETE HAYES

Press-Record Sports Editor

GRANITE CITY — Despite track having a 2-9 record last season, South girls' track coach Charlotte Charbonier says that this season is going to be a different story.

"WE'VE GOT a hard working group of girls who want to get out and give it everything they've got," she said. "I think the team morale is getting to be something that the girls are thinking about. They're actually enthusiastic about the season getting started at the end of this week."

That is another story in itself. The South girls are scheduled to run their season this Friday, March 31 at Belleville West. But torrential downpours last week and weekend have put a damper on those hopes.

"I have to admit that things don't look too good as far as getting the season started Friday," Charbonier said. "We (the girls team) have been trying to get on our track, but it seems everytime we get out there and try and do some good we rains come and it's back indoors we go."

CHARBONIER SAID that realistically she doesn't expect to be able to get the season underway until after the first of April.

"Unless the sun stays out all this week and dries out the track, I don't see how any school will be able to get their season started."

As far as Friday's season-opener at Belleville West is concerned, Charbonier said that the all-weather track at Belleville East is a possibility, but she doesn't know what the chances of that being available for the girls' meet are.

ALL-WEATHER tracks are made of a rubber-like material which does not soak up water and is usable in bad weather.

Besides Belleville East, O'Fallon High is the only other school in the area with one.

"WE'RE EXPECTING more out of the girls this year," said Charbonier, referring to she and assistant coach Mike Loftus. "And so far, they've been willing and able to give us everything we've asked of them and more."

"We've got a hard-working group this year. But you can only get so much good out of running the halls," she said. "We really want to get outside."

"It seems that everybody on the team is a little better than when we saw them at the end of last season," she added. "We didn't really think they'd run too much during the off-season, but it looks like they did."

CHARBONIER'S hopes for this season center around qualifying someone from her team for district competition.

"We didn't send anybody to district last year," she said. "But I feel we've got a good chance to this year with some of the talent we've got and as hard as we're working."

Dannia DePew, a senior hurdler, said the South returnees are Cindy Jakovich, a junior discus thrower; Vicki Guth, a senior long jumper and high jumper; Nancy Stevens, a junior sprinter; and Debbie Engelman, a senior hurdler.

"WE HAD 40 girls come out for the team at the beginning of the season," said Charbonier. "But through attrition, the number is down somewhat from that now. But I'm amazed at the interest that has developed for the girls' sports this year."

Charbonier said the toughest schools on South's schedule this season will be East St. Louis Senior and Belleville West.

"They are going to probably be the toughest, but I'll tell you," she said, "this entire district is one of the toughest in the state. In fact, I'd say it's THE toughest."

AS FAR as whether or not the girls on the team miss the support which the boys' teams receive from the fans in the area, Charbonier said, "Oh, it might bother them a little, but you can't really miss what you've never had."

The South coach said that fan interest is building. "We've got more interested parents this season than ever before, and I think it may filter over to the rest of the fans."

THE MAIN CONCERN for Charbonier right now, however, is getting her girls outside. She put aptly "recently when she said, "The handoffs for the relays are looking great in the halls. I wonder what they'll be like outside?"

A Madison resident, James Crowder, was the leading percentage shooter from the field during his two-year basketball career at Lincoln Junior College in Lincoln, Ill.

The son of Mrs. Lillie Crowder, Apt. 22, Garreche Homes, Crowder made 122 of 237 shots for a 51.5 percent mark in helping the Linx to a combined 45-24 record for the 1976-77 and 77-78 campaigns.

He totaled 317 points during that span, and averaged 20.3 percent from the free throw line. Crowder, a 1976 graduate

Smith efficiency, earnings increase

A. O. Smith Corporation expects both sales and earnings in the first quarter to be ahead of a year ago, L. B. Smith, chairman and chief executive officer, predicted last week at Milwaukee.

The earnings increase will come as a result of improved efficiency in the Automotive Division and substantially higher volume at A. O. Smith Harvestone Products, Inc., a subsidiary.

All operating units but the Automotive Division will have first-quarter 1978 sales above a year ago, Smith said.

He estimated first-quarter profits from continuing operations at between $5,400,000 and $5,900,000, or $1.10 to $1.20 per share, with sales of about $185 million.

In the first quarter last year, earnings from continuing operations were $4,734,000, or 97 cents per share, on sales of $181,688,000.

Most operating units had improved profits. Harvestone Products, which manufactures livestock feeding systems, is expected to report the best improvement over the previous year.

The subsidiary will have substantially higher sales, both dollar and unit, in the first quarter as the outlook for livestock farmers remains positive, Smith said.

Sales at the Automotive Division, which manufactures automobile and truck frames, will be down as a result of reduced vehicle sales compared with last year.

A year ago, the division's profits suffered severely due to the effects of a major model change. This year, with a second major model change essentially completed, profits improved despite the lower volume.

Profits in the quarter throughout the company will be modestly affected by the severe winter weather, which caused a number of plant closings.

A year ago, profits were also hurt by a cold winter which forced the use of more expensive alternate fuels to keep plants operating.

A. O. Smith, with its subsidiary and affiliates, is a diversified manufacturer. Its product line includes water heating equipment, electric motors, agricultural feed storage and handling systems, auto and truck frames, fiber glass reinforced plastic pipe and computer services.

GETTING COMFORTABLE TO DO HOMEWORK Cindy Huckelberry, Granite City, relaxes in the University center while she catches up on her reading assignments. The SIUE senior is majoring in sociology.

State selection at Cahokia this week

Sixteen Illinois State Lottery players are eligible for a top prize of $200,000 in the lottery's last drawing of the $200,000 drawing. The drawing will be held at noon Thursday, March 30, in Cahokia's City Hall, 103 Main St. The weekly winning numbers in the Lottery's new weekly Big Pay Day and Gold Strike games will be selected, and spectators will be invited to play a free game.

Three of the 16 finalists are from the immediate area: Maggie Melver, Cahokia; Jesse Copeland, Belleville; and Raymond Meyer, St. Louis.

To qualify for the $200,000 drawing, players must have matched the two- and three-digit numbers and the color on their weekly Bonanza tickets. These combinations were picked each week during the course of the 15-month game, said Carlson.

He pointed out that people eligible for the $1,000,000 Bonanza prize award in the past had matched the game's four-digit number.

The $200,000 drawing in Cahokia could produce a $400,000 winner if the color drawing matches the color on the finalist's qualifying ticket.

For example, a finalist with yellow as a qualifying color will double his winnings if the color drawn Thursday is also yellow. This doubling effect also applies to the $5,000 prize of $25,000 and the three third prizes of $2,500.

Each finalist is assured a minimum of $5,000 by qualifying for this $200,000 drawing.

In addition to the three people listed, to date these people are also eligible for the $200,000 drawing March 30:

- Joan Barrett, Blue Island;
- David Buntin, DuQuoin;
- Ronald Carlyle, Rural Route 1, Sherrard;
- Lucille Epkins, Pekin;
- Donna Kent, Peoria;
- Thomas Koplos, Des Plaines;
- George Melton, Belleville;
- Barney Peterson, Chicago;
- Joseph A. Rea, Cascade, Iowa;
- Ted Rimmann, New Lenox;
- Victoria K. Rzepko, Chicago;
- Clarence Taylor, O'Fallon;
- and Raymond Thielen, Racine, Wis.

2 highway budget hearings Tuesday

Public hearings on tentative highway department budgets for Nameoki and Chouteau townships will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday in those town halls.

Nameoki Township budgets totaling $285,050 will be discussed. They are $4,900 higher than in the previous year.

Although the highway budgets exceed the estimated income by more than $65,000, Highway Commissioner Frank Mellicie says they are realistic and that surpluses from the previous fiscal year and contract work on Pontoon Beach village streets should produce enough income to finance the budgets without raising taxes.

The amounts which can be raised by taxation could not be increased substantially, since both the road and bridge fund and the special hard road fund are at their maximum tax rates. Assessment changes could enable those rates to reduce more.

Nameoki highway budgets appropriate $144,540 for the general road and bridge fund, $129,500 for the permanent road fund, and $200,000 for municipal retirement.

Chouteau Township road budgets posted total $173,175, or $13,665 higher than in the previous fiscal year.

The Chouteau highway budgets provide $88,175 for the general road and bridge fund, $63,000 for the permanent hard road fund, $15,000 for the equipment and building fund, and $7,000 for municipal retirement.

The Nameoki Town Hall is located at 4250 Highway 163, east of Route 111. The new Chouteau Town Hall is on the access road north of Interstate 270 and west of Route 203 north (Old Alton Road), behind the Midwest Motel.

Venice Township will hold a public hearing on its highway budget in conjunction with its annual town meeting April 11.

The Venice Township highway budget totals $38,005, or $10,065 higher than in the previous year.

All three townships will hold their annual town meetings Tuesday, April 11.

On Illinois roads not taken — towns of Sunbeam, Fishhook, White Pigeon

By ANDY LINDSTROM

NORTONVILLE — Small towns. Buggy bays tucked in a hollow. One-horse hamlets with tombstones outnumbering the townpeople.

Wide spots on a hard road leading, eventually, to somewhere. A better road, perhaps, or a bigger town.

In the beginning, of course, every great city once was a small town. An Indian village or a stagecoach stop. A grain elevator or country post office.

Chicago was Fort Dearborn and a wild onion patch. Springfield was John Kelly's cabin on the edge of a prairie.

The competition was keen. Any place where two roads crossed, or a stream needed fording, or a coal shaft was sunk became a small town.

A few prospered and grew, most died for dozens of reasons.

A route was changed, a need was unmet or a better chance beckoned down the road.

And the small town remained stillborn, wind-lashed, sunburned, sleeping through the seasons by a rusted brace of railroad tracks.

White Pigeon. Rising Sun. Golden Gate. Bone Gap.

They checker the Illinois countryside like wild flowers tossed by the wind.

Round Knob. Flat Rock. Fountain Green. Shanghai City.

"I'll show you the town. It'll take about five minutes," an old man says, warming his hands by a wood fire.

"What do you want to write about this place for?" a woman asks. "The only thing ever happened here was when they took the Presbyterian Church out and put a fire station on the spot.

"Never did have a fire in this town."

Passport. Alright. Incline. Harmony. Kane and Old Kane. Berlinne and New Berlin.

The names are a litany of pioneer optimism. A roll call of might-have-beens. A haven from the hubbub of too many people, too many cars, too many problems.

Sunbeam. Preemption. Disco. Haypress. Plum River.

"What do I do around here in the winter?" muses a man with fishnets hanging from a backyard clothesline.

"Nothing," his wife answers from another room. "Except waste the day down at Schaeffer's garage."

Roots. Blood. Zenith and Pearl. Alpha and Omega. Zenith and Lowpoint. West Point and Annapolis.

"What's a small town?" puzzles a Department of Transportation official.

"That's a good question."

"I guess it depends on who you talk to. Some say any town under 2,500 population is a small town. Some say any place under 25,000."

"Just so it's incorporated, I guess."

Zenobia is not incorporated. Its population is Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Weber. Not counting their four cats and one stray dog, that adds up to two.

By definition, Zenobia may not be a town. But it is on the map.

So is White Oak, where nothing remains but an abandoned church. And Riddle Hill. Buffalo Hart. Little Indian. Saldora. Ashhook. Reader and Sweetwater.

Hundreds of small towns dot the map of roads not taken, fine print on broken blue lines through the Illinois outback.

Burnt Prairie. Paw Paw. Sailor Springs. Bible Grove.

They circle the cities like satellites, backwash of the urban flood. A grain elevator on a country railroad, like Chesterville and Fancy Prairie. An abandoned store like Zenobia or a fish camp like Snicarta.

A played-out mine town like New Standard City, a Utopian experiment like Nauvoo. A proposed state capital like Waynesville, a steamboat stop like Kampsville.

"Our town is so small the bridge was out for almost a year before anybody noticed," says an Easton stakeholder.

"You can't get to our town when spring comes and the creek is over the road," warns a farmer from Time.

Honey Blind. White Oak. Old Stonington. New City.

The names are an invitation to discovery, a close encounter with the land. Losers in the struggle for survival, some say. Salt of the Earth, others reply.

"How many people in this town? Let me see."

The old man counts silently, working his fingers and staring at the inside of his slacks.

"There's me and the Missus. Claude Hills and his wife — no, Claude died a couple of weeks ago. Then there's the feller from Chandellville. About 12 all told, I guess."

Then, brightening, "But there used to be more than 30 before the hard road came through. May come again if they run out of gas the way some say."

Energy. Ray. New Grand

Chain. Horseshoe. Golden Eagle.

"Anything exciting in this town. No, I reckon not." The man stops unloading firewood to blink.

"Had a tornado once, put a tree limb right through one fella's front parlor. Can't remember any crime."

By urban standards, crime is negligible in small towns. Unfortunately, so are most of the amenities that make cities a necessity.

"If you run out of gas, too bad," says a man in Nortonville.

"Course, somebody'll probably give you some to get to a pump in Murreysville."

"They've got a gas station. And three stores."

Rollie Angel spends his day at the Fancy Prairie grain elevator, watching television game shows and talking with his farmer neighbors.

"Most of the wives work," explains elevator operator Frank Showalter. "Besides this is the only place in town to buy soy pop."

Showalter has lived in Fancy Prairie 62 years, his whole life. Most small towns are dominated by seniors like 80-year-old Glenn Saffer.

"I used to know every single person in this town," says Saffer, who rises every morning two hours before dawn to sweep up at a Williamsville warehouse. "The old ones have died and the young ones moved to the city."

A few small towns are hanging on as bedroom communities for nearby cities. A few have attracted bargain-hunting businesses and are growing again.

But most are fading away as the cemeteries fill and the moving vans pull away.

State pay raise issue is bringing thoughts of Congress' cost trend

By KEN WATSON

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. James H. Thompson has wisely pulled back on the state pay raises issue.

Big Jim smelled trouble ahead on the Illinois political trail and he was right. There was a clear ripple of discontent when Thompson welcomed recommendations by a special commission, including a $25,000 a year hike for himself.

The governor is currently paid $60,000 a year.

Democratic governor candidate Michael J. Bakas and his allies tore into the issue with the zeal of a campaigner who has caught his opponent flinching free plus from the church bazaar.

Up and down the state candidates for various offices were letting their constituents know as loudly and forcefully as they could that they were opposed to any pay increases.

It is something that a taxpayer voting public likes to hear.

It appeared that Thompson had made one of his few political miscalculations since taking office. But he has rebounded back from the brink in the nick of time.

The governor says now that he will sign a pay increase bill only if it is passed in the regular session of the Legislature. This is the one that concludes before election day in November.

He will not, Thompson insists, be a party to any maneuvering, common in the past, whereby a "lame" duck session would pass a pay hike bill with little fear of retribution from the voters.

Thompson bluntly told legislators that if they want his signature on a pay bill they will have to act between now and election day thereby risking the voters' wrath.

That position pretty much shoots down state pay raises as a legislative and political issue for 1978.

For nervous lawmakers are about as sure as they are to increase the state income tax.

It is unfortunate that the pay issue always seems to become entangled in politics. It deserves a more objective approach. For salaries paid some top-leveled officers are indeed far from adequate when viewed against the demands and responsibilities of our times.

There is a vast gulf between the elected official who views the state's executive pay structure and how it is viewed by the man-on-the-street.

To the average citizen the fact that Thompson would approve an increase in his own salary up to $75,000 a year is outrageous.

Yet in the executive rooms of the many great business corporations that flourish in Illinois, it would be considered ridiculous to attempt to find a qualified executive to run a $10 billion a year operation on a salary of $50,000 a year.

Nor is the governor at the top of the state salary ladder by any means. John E. Corbally, president of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, is paid $64,000 a year. Richard H. Moy, dean of the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine at Springfield, is paid $66,500.

Much higher pay for the governor to Illinois threatens to appear to be justified considering the great range of his duties and responsibilities.

Nor would a pay increase from $42,500 to $65,000 for the attorney general be considered exorbitant.

The attorney general is the state's chief law enforcement and legal officer.

Yet a lawyer in private practice in Springfield, much less Chicago, who does not make $65,000 a year or more does not rank too high in the economic esteem of his peers.

What invariably leads to public resistance to top-level pay increases is poor timing — an election year or a tendency to jump too high at once.

The Legislature further complicates the problem. The average taxpayer feels the lawmakers are highly overpaid and the $20,000 a year salary achieved in 1975 may well have marked a plateau.

Illinoisans have not indicated they want to abandon the concept of a part-time Legislature. By constantly increasing legislative salaries, lawmakers are creating whose members' preoccupation would be in steadily increasing their pay and fringe benefits — an example already clearly set by Congress.

Way sought to reduce stress, heart disease

(American Psychological Association) It is becoming common knowledge that traditional risk factors — hypertension, cigarette smoking, and elevated cholesterol — fail to predict most new cases of coronary heart disease (CHD).

Type A personalities are "characterized by excessive, hard-driving job involvement, competitiveness, aggressiveness, and a sense of time urgency."

The Type B personality is relatively free of such characteristics.

Considerable evidence links Type A's to CHD. However, the social-psychological characteristics, particularly the interpersonal interactions, of Type A's in a work situation have only recently been studied.

Two psychologists, from Eckerd College in St. Petersburg, Fla., tested their predictions that when waiting for a stressful event to occur, Type A's "would display a greater desire than B's to wait with others," but that in a stressful working situation, Type A's compared to Type B's prefer to work alone rather than with others.

Using 50 volunteer students, classified as either Type A or B, as their subjects, Drs. Dembroski and MacDougall placed half of their 25 Type A and 25 Type B subjects in a high-threat situation (painful electric shocks) and the remaining half of the subjects in a low-threat situation (subliminal stimulation).

The subjects were told that the purpose of the experiment was to study the effects of sensory stimulation on various types of mental tasks.

All subjects were given the choice of waiting for the experiment to begin in a room with a group of other participants or in a room alone.

They also were given the choice of working on the mental tasks alone, with others, or in a leader-directed group.

Most (76 percent) of the Type A's in both the high- and low-threat situations preferred to wait with others, while only 44 percent of B's did so.

"However, in spite of this tendency to wait with others prior to working on the task, Type A subjects showed a decided preference for actually working on the tasks alone."

"As predicted, Type A subjects in the high-threat condition showed the highest preference for working alone."

"Type B's, under high-threat, significantly preferred working with others."

"In low-threat conditions, A's and B's 'do not differ in their relative preferences for working alone over others.'"

The researchers suggest that Type A's under the high-threat condition chose to wait with others because these subjects reported significantly greater tendencies to compare their behavior with that of others.

This reflects Type A's concern with mastery and performing well relative to others.

In contrast, working under stress with others or especially in a leader-directed group can hinder efforts to exercise personal control over the stressful situation. Loss of control is especially aversive to Type A's."

In surveying coronary patients and a matched group of controls, the experimenters found "that a single item — measuring desire to work alone when under pressure — discriminated coronary patients from matched controls and Type A versus Type B subjects."

Although the mechanics are not completely understood, there is evidence that affiliation with others during stress may reduce anxiety.

Cautioning that the "interpersonal interactions of Type A and B subjects warrant much more research attention," the authors suggest that "if Type A's could work with others often in a manner that increases colleague support — without at the same time producing interpersonal conflict or competitiveness — perhaps the result might be a reduction in some of the stress associated with the work setting."

"It is possible that reductions in the type of day-to-day stress that is potentially damaging to the cardiovascular system can have a significant beneficial clinical impact in the long run."

Refresher for operators of school buses

A two-hour refresher course for all school bus drivers who are certified will be offered soon. The date is to be announced.

The refresher course is an annual requirement for school bus drivers.

All such drivers must first take the initial 12-hour course to receive an Illinois school bus driver's permit to operate a school bus. A driver applying for a permit must have a doctor's examination, and drivers must also hold a valid driver's license from the State of Illinois.

Refresher courses will be given in two areas of Madison County: Granite City and Alton. Quad-Cityans wishing further information may contact their school district director of transportation or Harold E. Briggs, regional superintendent of schools of Madison County.

325 turn out for egg hunt despite weather

The weather was cold and damp Saturday, but it didn't stop 325 eager youngsters from seeking their share of the colored candy eggs in the Granite City Park District's annual Easter Egg Hunt at Wilson Park rink-pavilion.

The children were separated into three age levels — preschool, kindergarten and first grade — to make their search for the eggs, which were hidden in straw, strewn about the rink floor.

Prizes were awarded in each division to children finding the "golden" egg, most eggs found by a boy and most eggs collected by a girl and the child finding the largest number of eggs in his or her division.

Those winning prizes, with the event listed in the sequence as shown above, are:

Preschool—Lynn Yehling, 4, daughter of Mark Yehling, 706 Garfield Ave., "golden" egg; Bryan Nichols, 2316 Northridge, most eggs, boy, first; Rose Tomlin, 4503 Kirkpatrick Homes, second; Angie Narvaez, daughter of Mrs. Brenda Narvaez, 2535 Washington Ave., most eggs, girl, first; and Belinda Hagopian, 5, daughter of Mrs. Patsy Hagopian, 2904 Sheridan Ave., second; and Deena Garner, 5, daughter of Gary Garner, 1541 St. Clair Ave., most eggs, child.

Kindergarten—Stacey Metz, 5, daughter of Mrs. Sharon Metz, 1210 W. Pontoon Road; Jimmy Farley, 5, son of Mrs. Carol Farley, 3219 Maryville Road, first; and Neil Zimmerman, 5, son of Joe Zimmerman, 2008 Willow, second; Stacey Allen, 5, daughter of Mrs. Mindy Allen, 1631 Olive St., first, and Vicky Vangel, 5, daughter of Vasil Vangel, 2546 Cleveland Blvd., second; and Steven Smith, 5, son of Mrs. Carolyn Smith, 1705 Garfield Ave.

First grade—Susie Painter, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Painter, 2550 Boyle Ave.; Donnie James Jr., 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don James, 2943 Oregon Ave., first, and Robert Starbuck, 7, son of Mrs. Doris Starbuck, 2700 Cayuga St., second; Susan Schaus, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Schaus, 2106 E. 24th St., first, and Patty Weisheit, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Weisheit, 2734 Madison Ave., second; and Scott Carpenter, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Carpenter, 2913 Sunset Drive.

Vital that facts related to Scott be disclosed promptly

The potential scandal affecting Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott did not materially affect his unopposed victory in last week's primary election, but it could be a factor in the Nov. 7 general election.

A cartoon commercial that is running on many television stations, showing him happily diving into a stack of 50,000 dollar bills, seems extremely unfair in view of Scott's spectacular record as a super-active attorney general constantly aiding consumers. But it and the issue it refers to could have a devastating effect on his re-election chances, and there is a possibility he may be replaced on the fall ballot.

A fund totaling nearly $50,000 and kept in safe deposit boxes came to light during divorce proceedings. It was raised in the 1960s and early 1970s, before the 1974 campaign disclosure law went into effect. Scott says no law violations occurred, and he has provided his financial records to federal investigators.

The attorney general says he has no objection to the study of the financial records, but he labels expanded activity by U.S. attorney's staff in Chicago as "blatantly political," noting that he is a Republican and the federal attorney general is a Democrat. Grand jury subpoenas were served March 17 and 20 on top members of his staff in Chicago and Springfield, on the eve of the March 21 primary.

The initial probe by the Internal Revenue Service involves whether Scott used old untaxed campaign funds for personal expenses. He has said he used the money to pay political expenses, including donations to other candidates, travel for political purposes, and flowers for ill deceased friends and officials.

A Chicago newspaper article hints at a wider problem, alleging that Scott has lived far beyond his visible income for the past seven years. It notes that he testified in a divorce-related action in July 1977 that his expenses as a public official made him a virtual pauper despite his $42,500 yearly salary. He estimated that he had only $1.54 a month remaining from current income for food, vacations, clothing and entertainment expenses, forcing him to sell $31,000 in government bonds and notes.

The article disagreed, saying he accumulated $49,500 in securities in 1970-74, contributed $16,500 into a new state retirement program in 1976, lives in an $877-a-month apartment and vacations in California, Hawaii and the Bahamas.

Some advantage of the long span between the primary and general voting in Illinois is that there may be enough time for all facts to be brought out, either clearing Attorney General Scott or the opposite.

The many who are aware of his constructive record in office are hopeful that such disclosure can be accomplished promptly, so that voters can consider his candidacy on a fully informed basis.

America should protect its stake in the seabed frontier

Press-Record Washington Bureau — The deep seabeds beyond national jurisdictions are a potential source of manganese, nickel, copper and cobalt needed by the industrial world of the present and future.

The United States has the technological know-how and capital to begin mining the underwater treasures in partnership with other nations capable of conquering what Elliot Richardson calls "a new and inviting frontier."

And the ambassador to the continuing United Nations conference to formulate an international Law of the Sea was warning the participating nations that time is running out.

The 105 "developing nations" who have thus far stymied the effort to reach a treaty have visions of sharing equally with the major powers in the seabed wealth.

Richardson has been blunt in telling the clamoring countries that there will be no

"one nation, one vote" concept in sharing the fruits of American capital investment and research.

"Some limitation," he said, would be acceptable. But in the absence of reasonable discussion and workable accord, the United States may well go ahead without the benefit of international authority and supervision.

Congress has legislation under consideration to facilitate the beginning of deep-sea mining operations by American firms.

The measure should be expedited, not for selfish reasons, but to spur action in the lengthy often futile Law of the Sea bargaining.

Provision for reasonable access to the resources by all nations is a tolerable goal. In the face of rigid nationalism and unwarranted greed, however, the United States must be prepared to protect its stake in the seabed frontier.

News notes

Layoffs in county assessment staff

Madison County Supervisor of Assessments James Barton said Friday he had laid off 11 employees for a 30-day period. He alleges they failed to be on the job after 2 p.m. on two consecutive days (March 21-22) although scheduled to work until 5 p.m.

The full-time employees are "field men" who review property throughout the county, taking photographs and data on specific parcels, later utilized by those making assessment decisions.

The assessments jointly make up the tax base on which property taxes are levied. They provide part of the operating revenue for local-level governmental agencies.

The 11 men were summoned to Barton's office Thursday and informed of their immediate layoffs. They had been assigned to the Nameki Township area.

Their average pay is estimated at $8,500. While the layoffs were linked to failure to do a full day's work, they also were attributed partially to budgetary factors. Some of these laid off said they devote a full day to their duties but omit a lunch hour and "coffee breaks."

Barton told the Press-Record the abuses are real and have occurred on many days.

He said he is aware that there has been severe weather this winter, but noted that last Tuesday and Wednesday were "beautiful days."

The assessment supervisor said each field representative is required to start at 9 a.m. and and at 5 p.m., taking an hour for lunch, a 15-minute break in the morning and a 15-minute afternoon break for a total work period of six and a half to seven hours.

"Many have signed affidavits that they are working 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. but they aren't doing it," Barton said, adding that he is insistent that "the county should receive a full dollar's work for each dollar of pay."

He commented, "Many county assessors begin to use outside appraisers to perform this work, instead of assigning it to regular employees."

"I don't want to make this kind of change, but I must find some way of convincing the field men that taxpayers expect and should have a full day's work every day."

MITCHELL BASEBALL, SOFTBALL REGISTRATION
Baseball and softball registration for boys and girls from seven through 16 years of age is set for 6 to 8 p.m. today and tomorrow at the school gymnasium.

REVIEW BOARD EXAM
Examinations for persons who wish to become members of the Madison County Board of Review will be given in the County Board room at the courthouse in Edwardsville at 9 a.m. April 2, it was announced today. The examination will be conducted by a state agent.

Application may be made to the county clerk's office anytime prior to the examination date. Applicants must have two years experience in related fields such as real estate or appraisal work.

WASHINGTON BURGLARY
A television set, a tape player, a combination radio and tape deck and a speakers system were stolen during a burglary at the apartment of Sharon Smith, 2554 Washington Ave., Apt. 2, between 10:30 p.m. Thursday and 2:25 a.m. Friday. The front door was forced open to gain entry.

INJURED ON MADISON

Spring home improvement priorities to save energy

By LARRY D. LAPPIN

The first signs of spring are just making their appearance: the snow is melting, the birds are singing, the temperature is rising, and everyone here in Madison County is ready for better weather.

But homeowners are still receiving those utility bills for the past cold months. Now is the time to start making improvements so that next winter you are not left inside in the cold.

You are being bombarded with suggestions on what to do to reduce your home heating bills. But you can't insulate your entire house at once. How do you decide what to do first?

Unfortunately, there are no simple answers because what you should do depends on what kind of house you own, says Don Jedele, University of Illinois Extension housing specialist.

If you have an insulated one-story house, the attic is the place to start. This type of house has more ceiling area than wall area. Here, heat loss is greater through the ceiling. Jedele notes that thicker insulation can be put into the attic than in the walls, so heat saving per square foot is greater also.

If you have a two-story house with no insulation, the wall area exceeds the attic area, so you would save more heat by insulating the walls first. But the attic is easier and less expensive to insulate and is important, too. So, Jedele says, you might still do the attic first if you can't do both.

If your house already has some ceiling and wall insulation, you may save the most by caulking and weatherstripping.

Many older homes without weatherstripped windows and doors can have two complete air changes every hour. Weatherstripping and caulking could cut this air exchange in half and save many heating dollars each year.

Naturally, storm windows and doors should be high on the priority list, notes Jedele.

The owner of a house that already has storm windows and doors, weatherstripping and wall and ceiling insulation can look for other places to reduce heat loss.

One place that often has been overlooked is the header joist. This is the space between the foundation and the subfloor. Jedele recommends that you put pieces of R-19 batt in that space.

Crawl-space and basement walls would be next on your list. At least one-inch-thick polystyrene foam insulation should be installed to a point below frost level.

After everything else is done, you can take a second look at the attic. Jedele says that if your goal is an energy-efficient house, you can justify a total of 10 inches of mineral wool or fiberglass, or eight inches of cellulose fiber in the attic.

These improvements in the insulation will help you keep your house cool in the summer by keeping the heat outside. Most of these improvements

City spending brakes applied

Granite City department heads have been urged to put the brakes on spending for the remainder of the fiscal year to avert any chance that the city might have to issue anticipation warrants to finance operations.

In a letter directed to all departments, City Clerk Robert Stevens and City Treasurer Nick Petrillo asked the officials will pay for themselves in reduced heating and cooling bills.

When investigating the cost of these improvements, make sure you get a reliable contractor to do the work.

Everything need not be done at once. But it is important to make a list of the things you can do to save heat, and then get started on the items at the top of the list.

"If you make some improvements each year," says Jedele, "in a few years you will have a highly energy-efficient house."

to "conserve all funds in order to complete the fiscal year in the black."

The city's fiscal year ends April 30. The department heads were urged to "not buy anything that we do not need or can wait until the next fiscal year when tax funds are received."

"When our bill list runs in excess of $85,000 and our payroll exceeds $134,467 (semi-monthly), we must put the brakes on fiscal spending," Stevens and Petrillo said in their memorandum.

Although the city's fiscal year begins May 1, "There also is a paramount need to conserve funds as we operate from May 1 until sometime in July before the first tax monies are received," the two officials said.

Stevens and Petrillo pointed out that "The city has not issued anticipation warrants in over 40 years and it is not the intention to do so now."

Out-of-state office is worth its weight in gold to Illinois

By JOAN MURARO

SPRINGFIELD — At first glance it seems strange for the Illinois Department of Revenue to have a district office in Hackensack, N.J. But, says Reg Ankrum, public information officer for the department, there are a number of good reasons for spending $80,000 last year to operate the office there.

The good reasons all involve money, which, after all, is what the Department of Revenue is all about.

The 28 auditors working out of the New Jersey office are not entitled to travel expenses in connection with their work there, but would collect travel expenses if they traveled from Illinois to do their work. Since the going rate of per diem pay is $40 a day, their travel expenses including the per diem would come to an estimated $26,000 on a basis of the number of audits they made last year. In addition, the state would have paid $20,000 in car rental and $88,752 in air fare.

Total expense of having the audits done by auditors based in Illinois would have been $1.3 million, instead of the $860,464 actually paid to and from the auditors.

"At a conservative estimate," he said, "they would lose one day in travel time — actually, it's more likely to be two — for each audit. They have 28 auditors on the staff there. If they had been based in Illinois and had to travel back and forth each time, it has been estimated on even a conservative basis of one day lost each time, it would have cost the state $1.3 million for an estimated 250 days which could have been spent doing audits, which instead was spent in travel between Illinois and the East Coast."

The department, Ankrum said, breaks down the cost benefit this way for the New Jersey office:

The 28 auditors working out of the New Jersey office are not entitled to travel expenses in connection with their work there, but would collect travel expenses if they traveled from Illinois to do their work. Since the going rate of per diem pay is $40 a day, their travel expenses including the per diem would come to an estimated $26,000 on a basis of the number of audits they made last year. In addition, the state would have paid $20,000 in car rental and $88,752 in air fare.

Total expense of having the audits done by auditors based in Illinois would have been $1.3 million, instead of the $860,464 actually paid to and from the auditors.

"At a conservative estimate," he said, "they would lose one day in travel time — actually, it's more likely to be two — for each audit. They have 28 auditors on the staff there. "We think it boils down to how extensive should these audits be? Should we overlook them entirely because they are out-of-state? Every one of these audits is not collected costs the rest of the citizens of Illinois. We don't feel we should give preferential treatment to any firm just because it is outside the state," Ankrum said.

New Jersey was chosen, he said, because it is a central location for most firms among the 200 accounts the department office handles. The program has been operating for about a dozen years. Ankrum said originally with a New York base. It was moved to New Jersey several years ago, when New York rents became too high.

The Eastern firms are by far the most numerous, but department auditors do make on-site audits at other locations including Texas and California. These auditors travel from Illinois for the purpose, but he said it appeared to be more cost beneficial to establish branches in other states, which he said would consider it.

Space shortage blocking a full-scale state museum

SPRINGFIELD — Dr. Bruce McMillan, director of the Illinois State Museum, is deeply involved in an on-going space program.

He's trying to find enough space to do the things he feels the state museum for so "unique" a state as Illinois should be doing.

Like having walk-through anthropology exhibits, where the visitor will walk on materials which feel underfoot like a forest glade, or a cave floor where the visitor will walk among the lifelike, life-size figures, and can touch things.

A "discovery room" for children, where they will be free to explore the cabinets, perhaps open a drawer full of spear and arrow heads and take some of them out, to find for themselves how they feel, what they weigh, whether they are really sharp.

McMillan is planning for both these attractions, but in limited form just now. The "discovery room" is being considered for the Dickson Mounds facility, not for Springfield. There is no room for it in the Springfield museum.

Work on the foreground has been completed for the first segment of a walk-through anthropology exhibit, and is partially done on the second. But it probably will be another three years before all four sections of that exhibit are open to the public.

Meanwhile, McMillan ruefully re-reads a clipping which shows the elegant state museum Illinois planned to build in 1944.

Twice as big as the present facility, it had been approved and was set to move ahead when, as often happens in state government events, it was decided to postpone construction for "one more year." By the time the year was up, other things had changed and that museum never was built.

"And even at twice the present size, it only represented what they knew they needed back in '44," says McMillan.

What does the museum need for space today?

"We need triple the exhibit space, we need more behind the scenes space, we need room to evaluate and prepare and catalog and store," he says.

McMillan took over directorship of the state museum a year ago, on the retirement of long-time director Milton Thompson. He had been associate director under Thompson and doesn't feel there have been many drastic changes in policy since he took over.

There are some changes going on, though. In addition to the life-size dioramas (which were begun in Thompson's turn at the helm) the museum is currently creating a small gallery to be used for ethnic art shows, and another small permanent gallery where the museum can display 25 to 30 items at a time from its own extensive painting collection.

If more space were available, the museum could add to its various collections, McMillan said. From time to time donors offer collections to the museum, but they must be refused because the staff can't promise donors how often, or if, they will be displayed and in some cases there is no room even to store them.

An archeologist, McMillan is convinced that by the year 2000, nearly all the digging in the field type of archeology will have been done and the scientists instead will be digging among the collections stored in museums.

Illinois museum facilities already past capacity, he sees no way to provide adequate space for the kind of necessary research.

Presently, the museum has 8,000 square feet in a basement on Monroe St. where work is being done by some branches of the museum staff. The archeology activities are housed in another 3,000 square foot area on Fourth St. McMillan estimates the museum needs a minimum of 50,000 square feet as a repository for major collections.

India against farm trade with state

India's desire to become self-sufficient in agriculture appears to be a limiting factor in any expansion of U.S. farm trade in that Asian country. That appraisal was made by John White Jr., of Elburn, vice-president of the Illinois Farm Bureau. The Kane County farmer is a participant in a 16-day American Farm Bureau trade development mission visiting India, Indonesia and Hong Kong. The group returns to Chicago this week.

White gave this telephone report: "We had an unprecedented 20-minute audience with India's Prime Minister Morarji Desai and he told us that India is determined to be self-sufficient and reliant on its own agriculture for its food."

"At the present time, they are producing a surplus of wheat in India and as they develop the rest of their agriculture, they are determined to feed their own people."

"Seventy percent of the people in India are in agriculture and live on a farm. Farms are very small - 1, 2, 3-acre farms, with an occasional 10 or 20-acre farm. No one is allowed more than 20 acres."

"It doesn't look as though they will be looking for any expansion of trade of agricultural commodities from other countries, unless they have some natural disaster such as floods or drought."

"They have had successful crops in the most recent years and, with the irrigation progress they are making, it appears they will be improving their production as time goes on."

"Because they will be developing and improving their dairy production, so they might be interested in importing some dairy animals from the U.S. or Canada."

Held on warrants

Omer D. Smith, 65, of 2313 E. 23rd St., was found lying on the restroom floor at Cline's Restaurant, 2019 State St., at 8:15 p.m. Friday, and was taken into custody on warrants alleging failure to appear on charges of driving while intoxicated and careless driving.

Bond was set at $300 cash and he was ordered held for the Madison County Sheriff's Office, which also has warrants for his arrest, local police said.

COURSE GRADUATES AND NEW PARTNERS.

Fred McCollegan, left, and John Bell are pictured with their certificates of completion of the salon management consultant course, presented at the Westport Sheraton Inn, St. Louis. McCollegan announced in the past week that Bell will be joining him as a partner in the Lion's Mane Hair Design Studio, 3717D Naneeki Road, Granite City. A lifelong resident of Granite City, Bell has been associated with the Lion's Mane for three years.

Weather-broken streets surveyed

Because of the deteriorating condition of Granite City streets due to the cold weather, snow and ice during the winter season, City Council members urged Wednesday night that the engineering department undertake an immediate study to determine a program of street resurfacing and repair.

The aldermen agreed that the city's streets "are in terrible shape," and commented that some streets are buckled over much of their surface.

Street Superintendent Lionell Portell said street workers have been busy patching some of the worst potholes and broken pavement sections, but noted that such repairs are only temporary.

"With two winters in a row with such weather as we have had the streets are in bad shape," Portell said.

Even the patching work will require a considerable amount of supplies and many work hours by street department workers, he said.

Monroe Brewer, city engineer, said his department is preparing a survey of street conditions in preparation for possible approval of federal legislation providing grant funds for communities particularly hard hit by winter storms during the past 1977-78 season.

This survey should provide any information needed by the city to repair or resurface streets which the city is able to finance on its own.

Portell said that he is convinced that the only satisfactory way to solve the street damage problem is to resurface such streets with an overlay.

Teenage pageant finalist

Miss Judy Evans, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Evans of 3028 Ash Ave., has been selected as a finalist in the 1978 Illinois United Teenager Pageant to be held at the Sheraton-Oakbrook, June 30 to July 2.

The pageant is the official statewide final for the United Teenager Pageant to be held in Washington, D.C., in December.

Contestants from throughout the state will be competing for the title. All contestants are between the ages of 14 and 18 and must have at least a "B" grade average in school. They are requested to participate in the Volunteer Community Service Program of the United Teenager Pageant.

Through this program, many youngsters are becoming involved in community activities by contributing at least eight hours of time to worthwhile charities or civic work, a spokesman said.

Among the prizes the winner of the Illinois United Teenager Pageant will receive an all expense paid trip to compete in the national final in the nation's capital. A total of $15,000 in cash scholarships will be awarded at the national pageant in December.

Contestants will be judged on scholastic and civic achievements, beauty, poise and personality. No swimwear or talent competition is required. Each contestant will write and recite on stage a 100-word essay on the subject, "My Country."

Miss Evans is sponsored by the Granite City Jaycees. Her hobbies include Girl Scouts and soccer.

Boating safety course planned

Safety in boating is no accident; each year in Illinois, persons are injured and killed and thousands of dollars in property losses are incurred by failure to adhere to, recognize, or practice good safe boating techniques, authorities say.

To educate the public in boating safety, the Illinois Department of Conservation, Division of Law Enforcement, administrators boating safety courses for interested persons.

The department has designated volunteer instructors to instruct safety education classes such as one scheduled to be held on April 5 and 6 from 6:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. at the Region IV conservation office, 34 W. Broadway, Alton.

The coordinating instructor for this class is Thomas Wakobinger of the Ill. Department of Conservation. Persons interested in obtaining further information may contact the coordinator at 482-1181, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The safety education class is certified by the Department of Conservation and those desiring to obtain a boating safety certification will be required to attend mandatory eight hours of instruction, such as the class beginning on the above date.

The class covers a variety of subjects, including rules of the water, Illinois boating law, first-aid, safety afloat, boat construction and design, and related topics for the young and old, boater and non-boater. The class is open to the public.

Hearing on Stallings School Tuesday night

A public hearing on the proposed closing of Stallings Elementary School in Granite City is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the cafeteria of Grigsby Junior High School, where school district administrators and school board members will hear opinions on the closing and its effect on students.

The public hearing follows four informational meetings school administrators have held in the area. The district's officials explained the reasons for considering the school's closing at the meetings.

Several Stallings area families have expressed the feelings that Stallings should remain open and other, older schools, should be closed instead.

Frank L. Kraus, assistant superintendent of schools, has said the board is considering a need to close at least one school because of declining enrollment.

Mrs. Margaret Michels dies

Mrs. Margaret Eliza (Lewis) Michels, 65, of 1725 Fifth St., Madison, died at 10:40 a.m. Saturday at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

She had been ill 11 days and a patient at the hospital for the same length of time.

Mrs. Michels was born and reared in Madison, where she had resided her entire life. She was a member of the First United Presbyterian Church of Madison, Gabriel Shrine 78, Whittier Shrine of Jerusalem and Granite Chapter and reduced state aid payments to the district.

During the informational meetings, it was noted that the enrollment in Granite City public schools has dropped by 2,500 students in the past five years. State aid is based in part on average daily attendance. All but 11 of the students at Stallings are currently transported by bus.

The district could save about $200 a year by closing the school, projections indicate.

Officials say Stallings students would receive an equivalent education in any of the district's schools. Stallings teachers would be given priority consideration for other positions in the district that are open, parents were told at the meetings.

Some remain in opposition to closing the school, which has been a part of the Stallings community for 70 years.

Await tests to charge youths

Granite City police are awaiting laboratory reports on suspected marijuana seized when police checked a parked car on the wrong side of the street at Fairbanks Drive and Amos avenue last week and found three youths, ages 16, 17 and 18, with beer, a marijuana and some alleged marijuana.

The youths were released after the suspected marijuana was seized and an incident report made. Laboratory tests are being conducted in Joliet, Ill., on the substance. No charges have been filed pending the results of those tests.

TAKE TIRE, JACK, HAT
The trunk lock was punched to gain access to the car of Jose Grindstaff, 2340 Parkside Apartments, prior to 8 a.m. Saturday. A spare tire, a bumper jack and a plastic hard hat were stolen.

UNUSUAL FOR EASTER is the snowfall that occurred here Saturday night and early Sunday. A white cover appeared on lawns, shrubbery and trees throughout residential areas such as the one pictured.

But all of the snow was gone today as the temperature rose from about the freezing mark toward the 50's. (Press-Record Photo)

Safety rules for children riding toys

By CATHERINE R. MAUCK
Madison County Extension Advisor,
Home Economics

As spring approaches, children will once again spend many hours playing outdoors. Much of this time will be spent riding bicycles, tricycles, wagons and other riding toys. Start the spring by teaching and enforcing safe riding habits. Follow these recommendations:

1. Warn children not to ride around parked cars, in driveways or on the street. Cars hide children from drivers' view and prevent children from seeing approaching vehicles.
2. Warn children against riding down steep hills and driveways, especially on toys that have no brakes.
3. Be sure that children ride toys as they were designed, with hands on handlebars and feet on pedals.
4. Discourage children from riding double on bicycles and tricycles.
5. When several children are riding in the same area, have them ride in the same direction.
6. Caution children to ride away from streets, other traffic areas and playground equipment.
7. Use of homemade cardboard road signs increases children's riding fun — and teaches them the meaning of real road signs.

Rules must be followed to insure children's riding safety. Adult supervision is a "must" when young children are using riding toys.

Is Medicaid abuse campaign issue ignoring presumption of innocence?

By MIKE KIENZLER

SPRINGFIELD — Comptroller Michael Bakalis' disclosure of two alleged "Medicaid mills" illustrates how political campaigning — and, to some extent, the news media's need to cover campaigns fairly — may interfere with the American principle of "innocent until proven guilty."

It also revives an issue Bakalis has raised before in his campaign for governor: Is Gov. James Thompson "getting a pass" from the Statehouse press corps?

Bakalis called a press conference to publicize his cutoff of state payments to the two clinics, which he said "scraped the taxpayers of Illinois to the tune of almost $1 million in 1977."

But the comptroller would not, at first, reveal the names of the clinics, referring to them as "Clinic B" and "Pharmacy C." That reminded reporters of similar charges earlier involving doctors who allegedly overcharged the state, two of whom Bakalis identified as "Dr. X" and "Dr. Y."

When reporters learned names of the physicians elsewhere, they found some of the apparent overcharges might have been the result of honest, though confusing, billing practices. And, though Bakalis used the doctors' examples to charge Thompson with "inept administration," Thompson said later some of the eight physicians involved had been under investigation by the Department of Public Aid before Bakalis' statements.

In talking about "Clinic B" and "Pharmacy C," Bakalis said his counsel had advised against identification of the clinics because it might hamper possible legal action.

He also noted the clinics might be innocent of Medicaid violations — even though he was suspicious enough to withhold payments of $82,000 the two agencies are claiming from Medicaid. But his refusal to identify the clinics led to the most bitter exchange Bakalis has had with the media so far in his campaign. The substance of the comptroller's charges was ignored for at least two thirds of the 45-minute briefing, as reporters tried innumerable variations on the question, "Why won't you give us the names, Mike?"

Bakalis denied his announcement was politically motivated or that the press conference was designed to criticize Thompson. Twice during the briefing, he even refused to answer questions about his own political campaign.

The only motivation for making the alleged improprieties public, even without the names of the clinics, was so other medical providers would not be tempted to try the same dodges, Bakalis said. (According to the comptroller, the two clinics, located on the same block in Chicago, diagnosed nearly all their patients as having the same illness — backache, sinus pain and anxiety. In addition, the physicians at the two clinics prescribed the same three drugs for every patient. This involved 800 patients.) But reporters understandably viewed the press conference as part of Bakalis' campaign.

After all, you are running for governor," one said. Bakalis himself did not criticize Thompson's administration for the clinic payments. But one of his handouts did say the clinics' practices "were so obvious, so abusive and so flagrant that the Department of Public Aid should have terminated these vendors from the Medical Assistance Program."

Bakalis stuck to his guns on the names during the press conference. But minutes afterward, he bowed to staff pressure and identified the clinics.

That set off a second storm, with the Department of Public Aid saying, "Premature disclosure of the names of agencies under investigation jeopardizes rights of citizens."

"If Mr. Bakalis continues to wage his 'war against Medicaid abuse' in this manner, he may severely handicap the effectiveness of future prosecution efforts," the Public Aid statement said. "The damage done to a provider's reputation, should the provider ultimately be found not to have violated the department's requirements, in addition to the basic unfairness involved, may subject the department and its employees to defamation lawsuits by the provider."

'Private property' protected poll sign

Joseph Garcia, Democratic precinct committeeman in Nameoki Township Precinct Three, said Friday that he was unable to remove an "Estes for sheriff" campaign sign from private property near the polling place on Courtenay Boulevard.

Garcia said he attempted to ask Estes supporters to remove the sign, but they contended it was on private property and nothing could be done.

The issue first began when election judges noticed the sign posted on a tree near the entrance of the home which was the polling place. The judges contacted County Clerk Evelyn Bowles, who said the sign should be removed.

An Estes campaign official, however, told Garcia he would not move the sign and that the committeeman had no right to go onto private property to remove it.

Supporters of Emil Toffant, the sheriff primary winner, then got a portable sign saying "Toffant for sheriff" and placed it on private property in the yard on the opposite side of the poll from the Estes sign.

"Some people are blaming me for not removing the Estes sign, but I want it on the record that I could not remove it. We do everything we can to run a clean precinct here," Garcia concluded.

Judges pointed out that it was not Toffant supporters who objected to the sign being too close to the polling place, but it was the Precinct Three election judges, who were of both political parties.

"Finally, Evelyn Bowles told us we had done everything we could, but she said she would make a report on it to the state Board of Elections, so that the judges would be cleared of blame," a poll judge said.

Unsung heroes in the fight against leukemia

By VINCENT CARROLL
LEMON — If ever a surefire screening test for leukemia is found, the real heroes in the development may well be 750 beagles at Argonne National Laboratory.

These beagles are being exposed to low-level doses of radiation, along with poisons such as benzene, which eventually may cause cancer.

One of the purposes of the experiments is to find out what are the earliest symptoms of leukemia and exactly what physical changes occur in the body.

As it is, doctors have no simple way of quickly determining whether a person has leukemia.

"The disease is not an all-in-one thing. A person might feel a little tired and be a little pale. It would look like anemia but be something far more serious," explained Tom Fritz, assistant director for animal facilities at Argonne.

Beagles are used in the experiments because they have become the standard animal in biological research. Also, they are pack animals, cooperative and congenial.

They have one other advantage. "There's almost no history of spontaneous bone tumors in beagles. There's been only three or four recorded ever," Fritz said.

That means if a tumor does develop in one of the beagles at Argonne, researchers can be fairly certain it was caused by the radiation.

"We get a lot more data for the same amount of work with other animals," Fritz said.

Besides discovering the first physical symptoms of leukemia, scientists also are interested in determining just how small an amount of radiation is dangerous.

"We'd like to go through the gamut and go as low as possible. There's a lot of arguing about standards for safe doses of radiation, but we just don't have the data to know what's safe," Fritz said.

Even X-rays might be dangerous, if a patient receives enough of them, he added.

Not all the information the researchers at Argonne would like to learn can be obtained from the current generation of dogs. Experiments will have to continue for many more years, on hundreds more beagles.

Already scientists at Argonne have spent 17 years raising and breeding beagles for experiments. As a result, the dogs they now are using are rather special. Hereditary defects largely have been eliminated, as have virtually all internal dog parasites. The dogs also are vigilantly protected against disease.

"In this day and age you've got to control the animals' environment to that extent if you're going to have successful, long-term experiments," Fritz said.

He said the average life of a beagle was about 4,000 days, or between 10-12 years. The beagles must be protected throughout their entire lifetimes if experiments are to be successful, he added.

Charles Meyer attends workshop

Charles A. Meyer of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Granite City was one of 29 Christian Scientists participating in an all-day workshop meeting called by Robert A. Johnson, committee on publication for the State of Illinois, held on Saturday, March 18 at the Holiday Inn in Mount Vernon, Ill. All those attending the meeting were assistants to the committee on publication in their area.

In his keynote address, Johnson emphasized the importance of religious work as a contribution to the community.

"At a time when loyalties to groups — from the family group to the society itself — seem to be weakening," said Johnson, "commitment to church and all its uplifting, healing responsibilities could not be more important."

He noted that while the sizes of church congregations might vary from time to time, it was the quality of their devotions that counted for most.

"Many denominations today are working to strengthen their numbers — Christian Science congregations among them," Johnson noted. "The effectiveness of prayer is not a quantitative matter," he told his colleagues. "It is a matter of pure devotion to God and a faithful effort, no matter what the odds, to follow that brave and inspired early Christian example."

Also participating in the meeting were Adella Hengst of Benton, Ill., Beah Dintelman of Belleville, and Norman Anderson of Macomb.

These workshops are designed to help those who work with the committee on publication do a better job of responding to inquiries about Christian Science. This office of the denomination also supplies information of a corrective nature in situations where misconceptions about the Church of Christ, Scientist arise.

Johnson became committee on publication for Illinois in 1976. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois, a former real estate and insurance broker in Champaign, and a resident today of Naperville.

Your guide to big savings and little savings in electricity

If you're interested in conserving energy by using less electricity, these charts provide helpful information. What they show is that, in terms of kilowatt hours and costs, all appliances are not created equal. Cutting down on some types of electric use only has a small effect on your total use of energy. But reducing the use of major appliances can result in substantial savings.

These figures are intended strictly as examples. They reflect the average operating costs of various appliances. However they are a helpful guide to conservation. Keep in mind that

NOTE: The average cost for appliances used during summer is 4.05¢ per kwh. All other appliance costs were calculated on a weighted summer-winter seasonal basis (4 months summer-8 months winter) of 3.80¢ per kwh.

Probe house transaction

No meeting of city plan group

Wednesday's scheduled meeting of the Granite City Plan Commission has been cancelled, since the only zoning request on the agenda has been withdrawn.

Morris Realty was requesting rezoning at 20th and Benton streets, but notified the Plan Commission it wished to withdraw the petition. The next meeting is scheduled for April.

REINHARDT—Realtor
Sells—BETTER LIVING!!

An out-of-town couple who own a house in the 1600 block of Maple Street came to Granite City last week and found several items had been removed from the dwelling. They also told police a local realtor had a key to the house, although he had been asked to return it for safekeeping to a neighbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Olin Gibson of Washington, Ill., said Mrs. Gibson's sister had lived in the house until Feb. 20 when she became ill and moved to their Washington home, leaving the door key with a reliable person. On Feb. 27, the Gibsons decided to have the house appraised and called a local realtor, telling him to get the key and to return it to the neighbor after the appraisal was made.

On March 1, the realtor called the Gibsons, reporting the results of the appraisal and the couple said they would be interested in selling the property after their possessions were removed.

Gibson said he received a listing contract on March 4, which he did not sign, but on March 10 he received a sales contract to sell the property to a Granite City couple, who reportedly deposited $2,000 in earnest money.

Gibson told police he did nothing about the contract, as his belongings were still at the dwelling. The same day, the homeowner called the realtor and found he had retained the key. Again, he asked him to return it to the neighbor. During this call nothing concerning the sales contract was mentioned, he said. On March 17, the neighbor still had not received the key and a call to the real estate firm failed to reach the realtor and a salesman said he knew nothing about the transaction.

The Gibsons came to Granite City on March 18 and again could not reach the realtor, nor obtain the house key. At this point, Gibson told police he forced open the rear door at the residence and discovered several things were missing. A neighbor said that "people had been going in and out like flies," Gibson related.

The couple remained here and on March 19 a woman came to the house, asked if they were moving out and identified herself as the person who had bought the dwelling.

About a half-hour later, a second woman asked the couple if they were moving and said she and her husband had paid $500 earnest money down in preparation of purchasing the home. An investigation is continuing.

Bus system called more trouble-free

Newer buses, more extensive service, conscientious employee performance, and improved maintenance procedures contributed to a more trouble-free winter for Bi-State Development Agency buses and the more than 66 million passengers, despite this year's record-setting heavy snows and below-normal temperatures, according to Executive Director Barry M. Locke.

Locke praises Bi-State's 1,400 operators, who he said "have demonstrated an extra measure of dedication" in helping to counter what has been the severest winter in 67 years in the St. Louis metropolitan area.

"Numerous commendations for individual operators' courtesy and dependability have been received," Locke said.

Within the past year, Bi-State has introduced 382 new buses into its fleet, lowering the average age of the vehicles to less than four years and permitting retirement of many of the older buses, some of which have been a service as long as 25 years.

This younger fleet and an all-out maintenance effort were the main reasons the buses experienced fewer difficulties this winter, Locke said.

The new buses are equipped with larger defroster units, which help to alleviate driving problems in wet or cold weather, and improved heating systems which allow warmer, more comfortable rides.

As a precautionary measure, Bi-State had the heating units on all buses cleaned and inspected in November.

The reduction in winter transit problems is also attributable to a program inaugurated in 1977 which increased manpower at Bi-State's maintenance facilities.

The 161-route system is offering more efficient and comprehensive bus service, Locke said.

Its 100 new passenger shelters located throughout the service area continue to bring relief from the weather to the thousands of area residents dependent on the buses. Ten routes have also been added since a year ago, providing service to more area residents.

Workshop for firms on older consumers

The Illinois Department on Aging, the Southwestern Area on Aging, and Belleville Area College are co-sponsoring a two-day workshop for business people to help them deal more effectively with older consumers. The workshop will be at the BAC uptown campus on Thursday and Friday, May 4 and 5.

Role playing and lectures will present perceptions by some older persons of routine shopping and social events.

A session on development of communications and conflict resolution skills is planned, and some of the special needs and orientations of the elderly in business-related activities will be discussed.

Dr. Emeril Owen, a noted

gerontologist, will discuss definitions of aging, strengths and weaknesses of older persons, cultural attitudes toward aging, the aging process, the role of the older person in society, and myths surrounding aging.

BAC's Gene Verdu, Penny Neale and Sr. Mary Simpson will seek to clarify misconceptions concerning elderly persons.

Participants may attend either or both days of the workshop at no charge; however, reservations should be made prior to April 27 by calling 244-4410, Extension 31.

The Thursday, May 4, session is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. and to be completed at 12:30 p.m.

The Friday, May 5, session will run from 10 a.m. to 1:45 p.m.

Deadline near for reassigning numbers

Alan J. Dixon, secretary of state, said today that time is running out for reassigning 1978-79 fiscal license plate numbers for second division vehicles.

"Deadline for accepting reassignments will be at midnight Friday, March 31," Dixon emphasized. "Because of a new state statute passed last year by the General Assembly, this is one month earlier than previously."

Vehicles included in the second division classification are trucks, tractors, trailers, semi-trailers, mileage tax plates, farm trucks and trailers.

Price leading visit by Armed Services Committee to Soviet Union

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Melvin Price of this district has announced that a committee delegation is visiting the Soviet Union and Geneva during the period of March 23 through April 2.

The delegation will talk with Soviet leaders in Russia and U.S. negotiators in Geneva on matters relating to the proposed Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT), the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT), and other considerations in the area of defense policy.

The group expects to speak with officials of the Ministry of Defense and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs during its visit.

Chairman Price (D, Ill. 23rd District) pointed out that this is the first official visit by a House Armed Services Committee delegation to the Soviet Union. The 94th Congress, a committee delegation visited Communist China. And committee groups have made first-hand assessments of military conditions in many other parts of the world.

Price said a visit to the Soviet Union is particularly timely, since the committee this year is faced with important decisions in the area of strategic systems — decisions that must be considered in relation to the impact of possible SALT and test ban agreements and the pace of Soviet strategic developments.

Specifically, Price pointed to development of the M-X, a follow-on to the Minuteman Intercontinental Ballistic Missile system; development of the cruise missile, for which a 1,200-mile range limitation has been proposed; and continued development of the Trident Ballistic Missile Submarine, all of which could be affected by the SALT negotiations.

Price pointed out that not only do these systems have a relationship to SALT and a test ban treaty, but that under Rule X1(c) of the rules of the House of Representatives, the Armed Services Committee has special oversight responsibility with respect to arms control and disarmament.

To help the committee in carrying out that responsibility, the delegation will assess the prospects for a SALT agreement which would adequately protect the security of the United States.

It will attempt to gain information on Soviet aims in the Horn of Africa, and on the possibility of limiting the flow of arms into that area.

Massive Soviet military aid has allowed Ethiopians to drive Somalia from the Ogaden region, he noted. A committee delegation visited the Horn of Africa last fall.

Price said conditions in the Horn inevitably affect U.S.-Soviet relations as well as having a significant impact on the military and naval balance in the Indian Ocean area.

Chairman Price heads the delegation, whose trip coincides with the House Easter district work period.

Others members of the committee in the delegation are:

Democrats: Samuel Stratton (N.Y.); Richard Ichord (Mo.); Charles Wilson (Calif.); Robert Leggett (Calif.); G. V. Mollohan (W.Va.); G. Montgomery (Mass.); Patricia Schroeder (Colo.); Antonio Warr (Guam); Bob Carr (Mich.); John Breckinridge (Ky.); and Bob Stump (Ariz.). Republicans: Bob Wilson (Calif.); William Wallehurst (Va.); Floyd Spence (S.C.); Elwood Hillis (Ind.); and Marjorie Holt (Md.).

Some members are being accompanied by their spouses for reasons of protocol at no expense to the U. S. Government.

On its return, the delegation — in line with standard committee procedures — will file a written report.

Thomas Hatley attains U.S. Navy commission

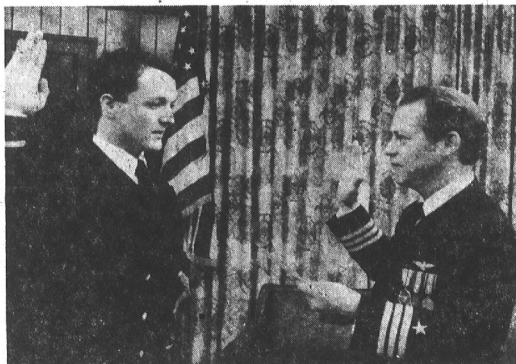

Ensign Thomas E. Hatley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hatley, 2208 Elm Ave., has received a U.S. Navy commission to his present rank. Ceremonies honoring the new officer were held at the Naval Air Station (NAS) at Pensacola, Fla. Navy Commander Cecil Durwood presented Hatley with his commissioning documents.

Ensign Hatley attended Naval Aviation and Officer Candidate schools at Pensacola NAS, where he is continuing to train as an F4 jet fighter pilot. He is a 1972 graduate of Granite City High School South and received a bachelor of science degree from Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville in 1976.

Prior to joining the service on Sept. 27, 1977, he was employed for one year by National Foods at Edwardsville.

Ensign Hatley and his wife, the former Miss Tina Beany of Edwardsville, were married last July 30.

New equipment for fishermen this year

By ART SCHUMANN

There is a lot that's new for fishermen this year, particularly in small outboard motors and in fishing lures.

Mercury, for instance, has changed its small outboard extensively. The 20-horse power electric-start model is equipped for full remote control, having an electric choke. It no longer requires a tiller handle. The "20" now has a standard, three blade propeller for better performance.

Mercury has also changed its four-hp Gnat. It has been significantly improved with faster, easier starting, smoother running and various refinements in the powerhead for added convenience and durability.

An adjustable fuel-metering device permits the operator to compensate for cold weather starts as the engine warms, resulting in smoother trolling operation. Evinrude Motors has also made many changes. The Evinrude 25- and 35-hp outboards are designed to handle the larger of the conventional fishing boats, utility hulls and light runabouts.

Among the changes in these motors are larger steering handle for operator convenience, a larger, long-life center journal bearing for improved durability, faster rise time ignition coils for better starting and running characteristics and a cooling system incorporating both temperature and pressure control.

The separate three-gallon fuel tank has also been improved. A new manual closing vent screw overrides the automatic vent system and provides an extra means of sealing the tank, preventing the escape of fuel vapors when transporting.

There is a great deal that's new in fishing lures, too.

Weber Tackle Co. will offer the Mr. Champ lure in both silver-plated and gold-plated versions. It's a fine bass and walleye lure. Tests show that a silver-plated lure has much more visibility than one that has a chrome or nickel finish.

Grassell's Double O Super Jig has been improved and is being offered in a variety of colors. The Grassell's "Ram-page" is a new muskie line that is certain to be popular. It has a built-in full of liquid motion and a spinner blade designed to catch light from most any direction. It should offer quite an attraction to muskies.

Abrogast Co. will offer its new Bug Kye series of lures. It's a fast-running lure you can either cast or troll with effectively. The lure is a floating-diving lure that can be given a variety of action by the angler. It's being offered in special colors developed to show up well in murky water. Arbogast is also adding a luminous mud bug lure and luminous hula skirts for use on other lures or jigs.

Uncle Josh Bait Co. has expanded its "kicker" series of lures to include a weedless feathered version. They will also offer a new pork rind leech to their line of pork rind baits. It's a fleshy super-soft pork rind leech and is especially effective when used as a trailer along with your favorite lure.

Uncle Josh will also offer a new patented salmon egg dispenser. You simply press in the plunger to release a single egg. The dispenser can be operated by hand.

Walleye anglers might want to try the Uncle Josh Rattle Rind on their favorite jig. It's attractive when bounced along the bottom in a jig. Rebel is introducing a new bass lure that is certain to be popular. In fact, it could be the best artificial lure being introduced.

The lure is being called the "Suspend-R." It's a crank bait that can be suspended at any depth by merely stopping the retrieve.

Used pesticide containers creating a hazard in state

By GORDON

BILLINGSLEY

SPRINGFIELD — Most used pesticide containers in Illinois probably are disposed of improperly, according to a state survey.

Farmers may have to face tighter regulations because of it, an agricultural pesticide expert says.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has published its recommendations for pesticide container disposal, said J.K. Leasure, head of the Plant Industries Department of Southern Illinois University.

But if past performance is any indication," Leasure said, "those suggestions which are disregarded may become hard and fast regulations."

Leasure spoke at a seminar in Champaign for custom pesticide applicators.

He said state pesticide surveys show that 80 percent of the used pesticide containers in the state are not washed as well as the EPA would wish. Many of the contaminated cans are buried or taken to landfills, he said.

His own surveys found cans that "contained surprising amounts of chemicals."

In one survey, Leasure said, less than 40 percent of the containers were rinsed at all. These cans contained an average of 2.5 ounces each of potentially harmful chemicals, for a total at the one site of 81 pounds of pesticides in 370 cans.

In addition, the survey team found cans of herbicides containing as much as 4.5 gallons.

The state survey of pesticide container disposal shows that statewide about 20 percent of all pesticide cans are not rinsed. About 30 percent are rinsed once, 30 percent are rinsed twice and only about 20 percent rinsed the recommended three times.

Leasure admits that data about disposal seems fragmentary but, he added, attempts are being made to collect more extensive data and farmers will have to take EPA suggestions more seriously in order to avoid a new round of legally enforceable requirements.

Ways are being developed to make container rinsing easier and more thorough chore.

A California system accepts the whole can and rinses it into the sprayer tank, according to Leasure. Depending on the versatility and speed of the equipment, such a rinsing now costs between $670 and $3,000.

Joint goal of this vital region — outperform Sunbelt, foreign firms

Remarks by President Kenneth A. Shaw of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville at this month's IMAGE luncheon:

I came before you with the words of a great American pioneer on my mind, Henry David Thoreau, who said, "If we are alive, let us go about our business."

Thoreau was one of the great individuals of the last century, but I would like to note that he used the plural pronouns, "we" and "our."

This sense of community of purpose, of commonality of interest, should be the guiding light in our own perception of IMAGE — Involvement and Management Advance Growth and Employment.

We can congratulate ourselves for acknowledging IMAGE's necessity. But we must make it work. The memorandum of understanding signed today is an excellent first step.

Our business is serious indeed. So we must emphasize at this outset that we are involved in something that is more than just a public relations gesture. The image that we project of this region must be founded on a bedrock of reality.

Extolling the virtues of this area and the larger region the world over won't do the job done.

The reality of which I speak is the exercise of our vitality because we are indeed alive — in a genuine partnership.

Every area in this country has its drumbeaters. But when decisions are made about plant relocation from elsewhere, significant expansion to the eastern side of the great Mississippi, or committing ourselves to all possible future commitment, they will be based in a cold look at the "bottom line."

If we are to compete with the so-called Sun Belt, foreign industry, and those other areas waking up to new life, we must forge a strong bond of partnership between management, labor and education.

I would like first to offer a brief general overview of the changes in our society that have affected both management and labor.

Then I would like to make a concise survey of the major assets we have at our command that we can draw upon to help make IMAGE work as a positive force in our society. Finally, I would like to offer a few suggestions as to ways we can forge this mutual partnership to achieve the objectives we have set for IMAGE.

As we look ahead to the world of the 1980s, it is worthwhile to take account of some of the changes that have occurred since the turn of the century — changes that have affected both labor and management.

First, one is struck by the realization that the world of work shows some fundamental differences from the older days, like them or not, they are part of the larger reality we must deal with.

With the advancement of technology, the kind of work most people do has moved from hard labor in heavy industry to more service-related occupations.

Once we spoke of blue collars and white collars. Well, more people are wearing striped collars, and top executives are wearing suits of denim.

The notion of hard work now is calibrated not so much in terms of being bone-tired as in tears, headaches and nervous stress.

Not only do we speak of being worn out, but we also hear of people being burned out.

There has also been a steady and relentless reduction in the work week, or the amount of time a person chooses to allot to his job.

This has also been accompanied with proposals concerning flexibility of time schedules, many of which are already central to advanced management strategy and labor aspirations.

Even though much remains to be done in bettering things for the very poor, it is interesting to see a dramatic increase in the number of people who would fall into the middle-class and affluent categories.

We have fewer poor now than ever, relatively, and we have many who consider themselves middle-class.

They are dreaming the fresh kind of dreams that come with having improved on the status of parents and grandparents, throwing those dreams in the face of rising inflation.

Finally, most of our citizens simply have more free time on their hands. For each one who uses this time for "moonlighting," we also have someone who wishes to follow the path of personal fulfillment through cultural and educational pursuits.

So we have, in an effect, a "new worker."

Of course, this worker is still interested in income. But we also see more emphasis on meaning and satisfaction in the work done and the conditions under which it is done.

Also, with the rise of the so-called "leisure" industries, these workers develop avocational pursuits, ranging from comic books, television, community involvement, to transcendental meditation to just plain, quiet fishing on a lake where they are punting.

The range of free choice is richer than it ever has been before for the vast majority of our citizens. We should urge our neighbors in this region to make the most of this most priceless asset — human freedom.

Besides these changes for workers, we have also seen radical changes in the way business operates. Of course, the bottom line profit must remain the prime concern. But we also witness a new emphasis to remain in employee welfare, and in improving the communities which house them.

Not only do we see changes for pensions has been invested, and has become a major source of capital growth. There is also, a "new management" that sees more than profit-and-loss statements.

Not all of the changes, however, have worked to inspire greater freedom in the marketplace.

New awareness in environmental matters has built in higher costs and burdensome regulation.

Business and industry confront a plethora of official agencies — local, state and federal — all laden with regulations, often unintelligible and sometimes contradictory. Fortunately, we have a new public sensitivity to this situation, recognition that a bureaucracy cannot necessarily regulate or guarantee the equality of treatment, absolute safety, or protection from all the elements in the universe that might cause damage.

The condition of the worker and the situation of the community demand greater understanding.

People seem to like change when it affects somebody else, but regarding their own interests, even wild-eyed liberals can suddenly turn deeply conservative.

If IMAGE does nothing more than open a dialogue toward genuine understanding of the needs and interests of all parties to the business of the region, we will have made a major step forward. However, that we have reasons to expect much more.

The recent past has taught us some hard lessons about going it alone.

In the first quarter of 1977, Madison, Monroe, St. Clair and Clinton counties had 16,000 people at work in non-agricultural jobs. The average annual employment in these areas in 1969 amounted to 16,000 jobs.

That's a net loss of 5,000 jobs during a period when our population grew by 25,000.

Our biggest decrease came in the production of machinery, manufacturing, where the net loss was 13,200 jobs. In other sectors, wholesaling, retailing, services, and of course, government, we saw modest employment increases.

So, production is the name of the game.

Projections indicate strong population increases in the region.

If we are to attract those who are now moving along the northern corridor of the region through St. Charles and Franklin counties in Missouri, and the southern corridor through Jefferson County — if we are to attract them with an open admission that we are going to make coming over to work and build in Illinois an attractive, viable alternative — we are going to need more new housing, along with substantial renovation of our existing residential resources.

We are also going to have to take advantage of our assets and forge that partnership of management, labor and education that I talked about earlier.

Just what are these assets? Even though the figures on jobs I cited confirm the service-oriented trend of our society, we still have tremendous potential that can be directed to higher production. Let me count just a few of our blessings.

First of all, we are land-rich. And we have the right kind of land.

Business and industrial parks already existing in Belleville, Glen Carbon, East Alton, Highland and Madison. Lots of ready land and housing for redevelopment in East St. Louis and environs.

Let's go forward with plans for industrial parks, like the O'Fallon, Cahokia and the Bi-State Parks Airport. If I left anybody out, let me know. Let's develop wherever we reasonably can.

Contiguous to this land and all these development opportunities is an especially attractive asset: transportation. After all, we remain the second largest rail center in the nation.

With improved roadbed and better rolling stock, we can offer manufacturers the chance to get their products to market efficiently and economically, whether they choose to travel by rail, truck or plane.

One area we have shown foresight in developing is our port facilities.

Money saved for pensions can bring the Lock and Dam 26 project to completion. Strong facilities for river traffic are already in place on the Kaskaskia and in the Tri-Cities.

Let's move forward with the establishment of a foreign-trade zone. We should be willing to trade with anybody who is willing to give us a fair shake.

In the crucial area of essential raw materials, we are really in the catbird seat. Not only do we have the richest coal reserves in the nation, but the state is actively working to make sure that development of this tremendous resource.

Further, we have plenty of good water.

Geographically, we are strategically blessed for years to come.

So to return to my fundamental point. What we need is a dynamic partnership, based on a full appreciation of our assets, and a mutual confidence that cooperation can produce solid understanding.

David Hume described the basic motivating force in man as enlightened self-interest. We all know that's not the best philosophy. But what must focus on now is making it fully enlightened.

If all the parties here can agree to look at the long road together, we can see certain things as necessary.

Our future depends on the number of variables. Let me describe some of them.

First of all, we must have a satisfied labor force. As I have noted, contracts are not settled now simply on the basis of wage clauses.

Besides security, let's also provide incentives that will assure workers that they will share in the rewards of above-average work, the kind of work that means better production.

There is considerable evidence that investment by workers in relevant decision-making can increase production, besides making employees more involved and satisfied.

An experiment in the Tarrytown, N. Y., plant of General Motors completely turned around a work force that had such negative morale the company was seriously considering closing the plant. Now the plant is scheduled for two new models.

So, production is the name of the game.

Projections indicate strong population increases in the region.

If we are to attract those who are now moving along the northern corridor of the region through St. Charles and Franklin counties in Missouri, and the southern corridor through Jefferson County — if we are to attract them with an open admission that we are going to make coming over to work and build in Illinois an attractive, viable alternative — we are going to need more new housing, along with substantial renovation of our existing residential resources.

We are also going to have to take advantage of our assets and forge that partnership of management, labor and education that I talked about earlier.

Just what are these assets? Even though the figures on jobs I cited confirm the service-oriented trend of our society, we still have tremendous potential that can be directed to higher production. Let me count just a few of our blessings.

First of all, we are land-rich. And we have the right kind of land.

Business and industrial parks already existing in Belleville, Glen Carbon, East Alton, Highland and Madison. Lots of ready land and housing for redevelopment in East St. Louis and environs.

Let's go forward with plans for industrial parks, like the O'Fallon, Cahokia and the Bi-State Parks Airport. If I left anybody out, let me know. Let's develop wherever we reasonably can.

Contiguous to this land and all these development opportunities is an especially attractive asset: transportation. After all, we remain the second largest rail center in the nation.

With improved roadbed and better rolling stock, we can offer manufacturers the chance to get their products to market efficiently and economically, whether they choose to travel by rail, truck or plane.

One area we have shown foresight in developing is our port facilities.

Money saved for pensions can bring the Lock and Dam 26 project to completion. Strong facilities for river traffic are already in place on the Kaskaskia and in the Tri-Cities.

Let's move forward with the establishment of a foreign-trade zone. We should be willing to trade with anybody who is willing to give us a fair shake.

In the crucial area of essential raw materials, we are really in the catbird seat. Not only do we have the richest coal reserves in the nation, but the state is actively working to make sure that development of this tremendous resource.

Further, we have plenty of good water.

Geographically, we are strategically blessed for years to come.

So to return to my fundamental point. What we need is a dynamic partnership, based on a full appreciation of our assets, and a mutual confidence that cooperation can produce solid understanding.

David Hume described the basic motivating force in man as enlightened self-interest. We all know that's not the best philosophy. But what must focus on now is making it fully enlightened.

If all the parties here can agree to look at the long road together, we can see certain things as necessary.

Our future depends on the number of variables. Let me describe some of them.

First of all, we must have a satisfied labor force. As I have noted, contracts are not settled now simply on the basis of wage clauses.

Besides security, let's also provide incentives that will assure workers that they will share in the rewards of above-average work, the kind of work that means better production.

There is considerable evidence that investment by workers in relevant decision-making can increase production, besides making employees more involved and satisfied.

An experiment in the Tarrytown, N. Y., plant of General Motors completely turned around a work force that had such negative morale the company was seriously considering closing the plant. Now the plant is scheduled for two new models.

So, production is the name of the game.

Projections indicate strong population increases in the region.

Officers were called to the motel when it was believed a burglary was in progress on the second floor. One youth was found rummaging through items in the linen room and a second youth was discovered hiding behind the door. A hush had been pried off the door to gain entry.

When caught, the pair admitted it was the third time they had broken into linen rooms at the motel.

TREATED AT HOSPITAL

The young woman was treated at St. Elizabeth Hospital, where X-rays were taken and she was released.

BREAKS DOOR PADLOCK

A burglar broke the padlock on a rear door and pushed in a window to gain entry to the house of Deborah Ann Tomlin, 5212 Missouri Ave., before 3 p.m. Saturday. A receiver and an eight-track tape player, valued at $100, were taken.

Driver charged

Responding to a call from Pontoon Beach police to assist in the pursuit of a speeding auto, traveling west on Pontoon Road at 1:15 a.m. Saturday, the Granite City officer arrived at Pontoon Road and Vine Boulevard, where the vehicle had been stopped and a passenger in the car became abusive.

The man allegedly refused to get back into the car when asked to do so several times, despite his girl friend also insisting he return to the vehicle.

Kende W. Mitchell, 20, of 1636 Primrose Ave., was taken into custody and reportedly refused to answer questions at the Granite City police station. He was charged with disorderly conduct.

FRESH
SPROUTS
Lb. 59¢

These crisp tendrils have been around for centuries, spending most of their lives in Oriental dishes. Cooked or raw, bean sprouts have a fresh, delicate flavor and unusual shape and texture which add new dimension to vegetable combinations, salads and main dishes. If you plan to serve them raw, wash well, float off loose particles and chill in ice water for half an hour before serving. Bean sprouts contain a high content of water, generally represent some volume of protein, vitamins and minerals. Try something different today from your friendly Kroger store.
